DECLARED "JIM RUSEAU" WAS DEAD

STARTLING STORY IS TOLD ON STAND IN RUSSELL CASE

Man Whom Claimant Is Alleged to Be, Said to Have Died in Louisville by His Own Father, According to Testimony To-day.

Another sensation was sprung in the great Russell will case in East Cambridge to-day when a witness swore that Joseph Ruseau, who testified that the man who claims to be Daniel Blake Russell is his son, James, had previously told him that his son James is dead.

The witness was James Mulhare. He testified that the father of James Ruseau told him that his son James died out West. The conversation, the witness declared, took place in 1904 when he was visiting in Louisville, N. Y.

VAIN FIGHT TO EXCLUDE TESTIMONY.

Attorney Proctor fought desperately to prevent the testimony excluded, but After a long Simpson triumphed over him and the testimony was admitted in evidence.

When Mulhare took the witness stand he testified that he was a hotel proprietor at Mount Mass. He said that he formerly lived near the Ruseau family in Louisville, New York. He was then asked:

Q. Mr. Mulhare, did you ever live in New York? A. Yes, I left there in 1881.

Q. Did you know a family named Ruseau in New York? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know one of the members of said family named James Ruseau? A. I did.

Q. Were you in that part of the country in several years ago? A. Yes. I went there in October, 1904, for a visit.

Q. Did you see Joseph Ruseau during that visit? A. Yes.

Q. What conversation, if any, did you have at that time, objected to by Attorney Proctor, not overruled. A. I asked him where his son Willie was. He said that he was working on a farm in Helena. I then asked where is Jim. He said: "Jim is dead." He died out West." He also said that Jim was killed and been killed on the railroad.

Detective Sought Clew.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Crowley Mulhare said that he did not ask Joseph Ruseau how Jim died, where or how. He said that he thought the deceased definitely that he had Jim had been killed.

Andrew Lange of Louisville, N. Y., testified that a detective employed by William H. Russell called on him at his home there and asked him about the family of Joseph Ruseau. The witness then continued: "I told him he was not here, that he was at his home in Helena. He said, 'Oh, no, he's not there. I've just been there.' They said he was here. I asked him what he wanted with him and he said he was working on a Russell case. I then asked him to see Joseph Ruseau. Jim was sick and told him that a few days ago my family had received a postal from Montreal saying that Joseph Ruseau was on the train and that in a few days he would be in Mount Appolo. Walter agreed to be and said

I did not know if it is admissible for me to say.

Mayor Fitzgerald has received through License Clerk Cosgr, the personal assurance of Manager Al Levering of the Boston Theatre that "The Queen" will not offend. Manager Levering is quoted as having said in Cuney:

"I have no desire to put on a show that is not absolutely clean. I will personally guarantee that everything will be all right. There will be nothing in the show that the most sensitive Boston man object to.

Churches Against Play.

Kicks against the play have been coming right along. Yesterday the meeting of the archdiocesan union of the Knights of Columbus of Catholic Societies passed for mal resolutions of protest against the show. Representatives of the federation called on Mayor Fitzgerald today. They finally told the Mayor they were willing to leave the matter to his judgment.

The Rev. F. B. Allen of the Warch and Ward Society has dropped into the Mayors office regarding "The Queen." The Mayor says he has not seen the play and does not intend to. He says he did not wish to interfere with the play, but sought assurance that it was all right.

The resolutions of the Evangelical Alliance, adopted yesterday by the Federation of Catholic Societies.

Call on City Authorities.

The resolutions state: "We solemnly protest in the name of all well-meaning citizens and for the protection of public morality against the production of the musical comedy, 'The Moulin Rouge,' and hereby urge the city authorities to prevent the production of this or similar plays."

There have been numerous other emphatic protests to the authorities against the play appearing in Boston of late. And it is said that then Mayor Hibbard stopped it before it started. When Mayor Fitzgerald was reminded this year of his predecessor's action he replied, "Well, Mr. Hibbard has his views and I have mine. I have not seen Queen

ROOSEVELT HALTED BY HURRICANE

KHARTOUM, March 14.—A terrific storm on the river Nile has delayed the steamer Dal and word was received here this afternoon that Theodore Roosevelt probably would not reach this city till to-morrow, though due at 4 p. m. to-day. The news spread rapidly, causing widespread disappointment. So high was enthusiasm, however, that nothing short of accident to the expected guest could throw a damper on the town.

The entire city was on tiptoe all day in the finishing touches in the preparations for the greatest reception ever accorded an individual in Africa.

The four corners of the earth seem to have been drawn upon to furnish the white trimmings, and their excitement is no greater than that of the black men and women who have come to regard Colonel Roosevelt as little less than the idol of their hopes, as a demi-god.

The unprecedented hurricane which for five days has whipped the muddy tide of Nile into a semblance of a storm-lashed sea, has held back the government dispatch boat, on which the hunters have been traveling from the verge of the jungle.

Storm Sweeps Desert.

The terror here at the junction of the White Nile and the Blue Nile had been whipped into a frenzy by the fierce desert norther, which sweeps across the desert with unbroken force.

Never in the history of this outpost of civilization have there been so many natives here. Every kind of river craft that could be brought to Khartoum, loaded with officials, tourists and correspondents. Many of these vessels today put out for the mouth of the Atbara, and several steamers with their passengers, including Mr. Roosevelt, are expected to arrive here by the end of the week.

More trainloads and boatloads of coal have been rushed to Khartoum with red white and blue Khartoum normally is a bit of a town, but the Roosevelt reception improvements, but its population is nearly doubled by the Roosevelt welcomers.

And every man and woman has only one interest in life—the coming of the former President.

Americans here, and there are a number of them, contend that the gale is responsible for the political storm which will rage when the hunting party finally arrives. So to speak his ialnd at some important meeting and nip his plan of campaign in the bud. It is impossible to ascertain at present the truth of such conjectures.

Still Mum on Politics.

The Colonel, despite the wholesale bombardment of correspondents who are hovering about the Nile steamer unloadings with their chartered steamers, refuses to talk politics.

He has shown himself, perhaps for the first time, a wonderful listener. He has absorbed, after the fashion of a dry sponge, every particle of trustworthy information of American and European affairs of state that has come to him. In return he has given it a good deal of importance.

The officials arrangements for Colonel Roosevelt's visit to Khartoum were made by Captain Clayton of the staff of the sirdar (Lord Kitchener), Sir Francis Wingate

DONOVAN EXPLAINS CROTTY'S ATTITUDE

The interest of Patrick J. Crotty, chairman of the Waterford Association, in the recent campaign of James A. Donovan, was voluntary and not induced by any money influence. The situation of the association and its chairman was made emphatic in a communication from James Donovan, who was prominent in the Storrow fight and which was read at yesterday's meeting of the association. Speaking of Mr. Crotty, Mr. Donovan said: "He neither overlooked nor sought compensation for his time or any work performed by him, and his letter of indictment of Mr. Storrow was voluntarily rendered to me."

MOVE FOR NEW TRIAL.

Papers were filed to-day with the clerk of the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, asking that the $12,000 verdict that was awarded to Miss Margaret T. Garity of No. 86 Seamon street, West Quincy, be set aside, and also moved that a new trial be granted.

GLOVER'S WIDOW AGAIN ON STAND; CLIMAX IS NEAR

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover took the witness stand for the tenth day in the Glover will contest this afternoon in Judge McInire's Court in East Cambridge. Her examination was continued by Lawyer Samuel D. Elmore, her attorney.

HATTIE LE BLANC'S SISTER TO TESTIFY.

It was believed by the lawyers in the case that Mrs. Glover would finish her testimony today. After that it was planned by the contestants to put witnesses on the stand who would controvert Mrs. Glover's story.

This is the beginning of the crisis in the remarkable will fight, and it is expected to prove of material assistance in solving the mystery of the murder of Charles F. Glover. The testimony that is to follow that of Mrs. Glover, it is promised, will be of a more sensational character than any that has ever been given.

It is expected that Irene Le Blanc will be the next witness. She is Hattie's eldest sister. She knows a great deal about the situation at the Glover home previous to and immediately after the crime. She has talked to her sister Hattie, who is accused of the murder, and to her the suspected girl has given information that will be of great importance in Hattie's trial.

Before the doors of the courtroom were opened to-day there was a crowd of women waiting in line to obtain admission to the courtroom. Irene and Lillian Le Blanc, it was said would be ready to take the stand at any time.

The plans for the defence of Hattie Le Blanc have been almost completed, and unless something new develops the lines upon which her lawyers will seek to free the pretty sixteen-year-old girl will be substantially as follows:

Glover was shot by a third person who knew several days before of the coming laundry trust between him and Hattie.

Glover had threatened the life of this third person, who had come to the conclusion: "It is his life or mine!"

The dying statement of Glover was not to be relied upon because he had been dosed with morphine until it was easy for him to be deluded as to who fired the fatal shots.

More than one person knew that Hattie was in the Glover house after the shooting and helped her elude he police when they searched the house.

CHURCHES PROTEST THE 'MOULIN ROUGE'

The Evangelical Alliance, composed of representatives or all of the Protestant churches of Greater Boston, today adopted resolutions, protesting against the production of "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," which opens at the Boston Theatre tonight.

The resolutions put the Protestant clergy of the city on record as being opposed to the presentation of the musical comedy in Boston. The resolutions are identical with those adopted yesterday by the Federation of Catholic Societies.

Call on City Authorities.

The resolutions state: "We solemnly protest in the name of all well-meaning citizens and for the protection of public morality against the production of the musical comedy, 'The Moulin Rouge,' and hereby urge the city authorities to prevent the production of this or similar plays."

FEDERAL LAW CAN'T PUNISH BUNCO GANG

The bunco gang which victimized Bookkeeper George W. Coleman of the Isolated National Bank of Cumberland, Me., is immune from prosecution as far as the United States is concerned.

Members of this syndicate cannot be reached by the Federal Grand Jury. There is no federal law, or precedent, by which they can be held liable. As far as the United States Government is concerned "Biz Bill" Kellier and his confederates can go scot free.

These important facts came to light to-day, as the forenunning sensation to the meeting of the Federal Grand Jury to-morrow. It was announced late afternoon that the Grand Jury at its session to-morrow will consider only Coleman's connection with the bank which it is alleged he looted and will not take up in any way whatsoever the relation of any member of the bunco syndicate with the former bookkeeper.

Members of the bunco gang are wondering if immunity from government prosecution by the fact that Coleman, according to the law was never officially in charge of the funds of the National City Bank. He was only a bookkeeper, supposed to be as far removed from the actual handling of the money of the bank as an outside individual. If he had been custodian of the funds, the case would be reached by federal law.

United States laws provide punishment for larceny, misappropriation of funds and complicity in the diversion of the moneys of a national bank. By a strict interpretation of the law Coleman never had any funds in trust, was never responsible for the disposition of the bank's money, and was not an official of the bank.

Whatever Coleman did he did, not as an agent or official of the National City Bank, but as an individual. Whatever the members of the bunco syndicate did they did as individuals.

Wilson W. Lockhart, employed in connection with the looting of the bank was before United States Commissioner Hayes in the Federal Building to-day. A hearing on his case was postponed indefinitely as the United States Grand Jury will to-morrow take up his case as well as that of George W. Coleman.

Lockhart and Coleman met in District Attorney Pinanski's office shortly after the former's case had been postponed. They greeted each other very friendly and talked for over an hour. Frequently both broke into hearty laughter. Both laughed very heartily when Coleman, telling of a trip he had made to the auto show Saturday night, repeated what he had heard a young and portly woman say: "Oh, there's the kind of a car that Coleman owns, Coleman, you know, broke the Cambridge bank."

Coleman came to the Federal Building to be further questioned by District Attorney French relative to the checks which it is alleged he had given to Manager Van Riperen of the stock brokerage house of Reinhardt & Co.

FEEBLE SNOW SQUALL MELTS; WEATHER FINE

A SNOWFLAKE flew though crystal air
In a flash of silver sheen;
She floated awhile in beauty rare
And lost her light to the picture fair.
Then faded from the scene.

FOR a Sunbeam bright in gold attire
Leaped down from his ragrant throne—
A Lochinvar on steed of fire
Sped on the wings of keen desire
And took her for his own!

A poor little struggling snow flurry came into Boston to-day during the commuters' evening hour. Commuters hardly noticed the snow, which seemed to be saying:

"Here, look at me; here I am; I'm a regular snow. Maybe if I live I'll be a real grown-up storm by St. Patrick's day."

It was funny, this little ludicrous storm trying to make a noise like real snow.

But you can't tell. May be there will be snow. Some of our best blizzards blow in March. St. Patrick's Day in Boston is usually stormy, as though the elements were trying to cover up the green.

In northern New York the worst blizzard of the Winter is raging. Traffic is paralyzed, snowdrifts being several feet deep.

The forecaster in Boston today was "Fair and much colder, Monday. Tuesday fair with high west and northwest winds."

SNELL, SLAYER, FALLS DEAD IN STATE PRISON

Saved from the death chair by the clemency of Former Governor Douglas, Angleo Snell, convicted murderer of aged Tilghman Kirby of Foxboro, died in the Charlestown State Prison this morning. He was executed just a building and died within a few minutes.

Snell was sixty-nine years of age. When Governor Douglas snatched him from the clutch of the electric chair near the end of 1908 the prisoner was very feeble. He was placed in the shoe shop. There he did many letter completed and did the tasks that were set him. But he is trembling fingers could. His cutting a pair of shoes his bright gray prison walls until the recollections of earthly might gathered about him.

Occasionally the aged prisoner mentioned that his hours trembled him, but for that matter so did the people of many of those who live behind those grim barriers. He stuffed himself with his task, keeping the lockstep with the man in front of him. Only once but a short distance when he staggered, made an ineffectual grab at a companion and then sank with a moan to the floor.

The grip in the left leg closed and the malformed unfortunates marched on.

Attendants picked up the old man and took him to the dispensary. But McLaughlin felt the man's heart. Its beat was hardly perceptible. In a few minutes it fluttered out.

Governor Douglas had given the old man over five years of life, even though he was sentenced for life.

The Kirby killing was a strange tragedy and the evidence was circumstantial. The circumstantial evidence after a hard-fought fight won a verdict of guilty, but Douglas was convinced of his life on the water. He went fishing in a green "sharpie."

Snell went fishing also. He went in a white "sharpie." Kirby never returned. He was known to have had plenty of money before he went out in his boat. After the murder Snell, who had never been known to have much money displayed a suspicious amount. Testimony was introduced to show that a white "sharpie" and a green "sharpie" were seen close together on the day Kirby disappeared.

HAMMER CAN NOT EXPLODE NEW POWDER

Boston men have formed an association to promote a new explosive which may revolutionize warfare. The invention is that of a new smokeless powder.

The powder is claimed to be absolutely smokeless, it is manufactured not from gun cotton and nitro-glycerine, but from chemicals, gives no "kick" when exploded, is two-thirds lighter in weight than any other powder. Cartridges loaded with this powder will carry eighty yards from a shotgun, or twice the distance of shells loaded with other powders.

The new powder will not explode when it is on an anvil and pounded with a hammer. It can be manufactured in thirty minutes. The inventors claim that but one-half the quantity of the new explosive than is used for blasting will do the work.

The promoters say:

"Children's explosives made from the powder can be handled more safely by them than those made from any other powder. It lessens by two-thirds the storage capacity of magazines necessary for other powders. It lessens by two-thirds the weight of ammunition carried by freight or on ship, or on supply trains, or on the person in the cartridge belt.

"The ammunition is ideal for the sportsman, exact for the marksman, perfect for the artillerymen and terrific in execution for the quarryman."

The inventors have been working five years in perfecting their product. The work of introducing the invention to the public has been taken up by the Standard Smokeless Powder Trust, which has opened offices at No. 1 Beacon street. The officers are: President, Leonard Dimond; vice-president, C. Henry Kimball; secretary and treasurer, M. Maurice Dimond.

Health Improved by Radium in the Blood.

PARIS—How would it feel to have a comparatively large amount of radium injected into the blood? Would radiumized man have immense superiority over his fellow beings? Would it add to his health or happiness? Such questions are suggested by a paper read before the Academy of Science by Professor Bouchard. He presented the result of experiments of French scientists, who have been occupied with the problem of injecting radium into the blood. The experiments were conducted with a horse for the subject. It is declared to have produced a most favorable effect upon the animal, both in the matter of nutrition and general health.

Leishman Assures Bodington.

ROME—In reference to the suit begun by Oliver E. Bodington, the Paris lawyer, Ambassador Leishman disclaims any business connection with Bodington. He says the question pending concerns only Bodington and the Countess de Gontaut-Biron, Leishman's daughter, who, through her marriage, is a French subject and has no legal connection with her father. Mr. Leishman says the Countess employed Bodington to settle her succession after her husband's death. Three other lawyers were also employed, and, according to Mr. Leishman, they actually conducted the case. The other three lawyers were satisfied with fees of about $1,000 among them. Bodington received $2,000, but claimed $4,000 more.

HAVE YOU TRIED THIS?

Simple Prescription Said to Work Wonders for Rheumatism.

This has been well known to the best doctors for years and is now given the public. "Get one ounce of syrup Sarsaparilla compound and one ounce Toris compound. Then get half a pint of good whiskey and put the other to ingredients into it. Take a tablespoonful of this mixture before each meal and bed time. Shake the bottle before using." Good effects are felt the first day. Many of the worst cases here have been cured by this. Any druggist has these ingredients on hand or will quickly get them from his wholesale house.

TAILORING FABLES

When you and I were kids we believed in fables—and some of us still believe in advertised fables. The tailor who tries to make you believe that a fine custom-made suit or overcoat can be produced properly for less than $20 simply depends on you as a "one time customer." That kind of a business is based on the theory that a fool is born every minute.

Newman-made clothes are absolutely the only custom tailored garments that cannot be obtained in Greater Boston less than $30—Our price $20.

Newman hand-made collars HUG THE NECK.

The coat front is unbreakable and does not curl, the lapels lay perfectly—in fact, wherever hand work should be IT IS!

CATHOLICS FREE FROM POLITICAL PARTY TIES, DECLARES ARCHBISHOP

It will make them also realize that we prefer a good, just, honest, square-dealing public official who is not of our race or creed to any one, no matter what Irish his name nor how Catholic his lineage, who by his acts of weak compromising with purely political chicanery proves himself unworthy of confidence.—Archbishop O'Connell.

Declaring that Catholics are not linked to political parties and that the honest non-Catholic is preferred in office to the weak compromiser, Archbishop William H. O'Connell in a speech at the annual convention of the Archdiocesan Federation of Catholic Societies said that the federation stands for purity in public life and "we mean no machine tactics," he declared. "We must stand out in the open. We are no party. We never will be a party."

"We have no fear," he declared, "We shall not go to City Hall or Beacon Hill with cringing petitions. Both the Governor and the Mayor are public servants and they have no more right to foist their individual preferences and favoritisms upon the public than a private citizen has to make laws."

Dominance of Wealth.

Besides discussing politics, the Archbishop made an emphatic protest against the dominance of wealth and urged the members of the federation to stand forth against the maximum in the days when money and all it can purchase is struggling for complete mastery over every phase of human life.

He spoke as follows:

"The progress which the spirit of Catholic federation is making all around us is most encouraging. Within two years it has gathered around itself a force for good which is the envy of many a city.

"It is an educational movement which within a few years will bear such fruit as none of us can foretell.

"It will bring men into the open arena of public civil life who hitherto have been refused a hearing.

"It will put a time value upon fidelity to conscience and adhesion to high principles which have been heretofore underrated in some quarters.

Equal Justice to All.

"It will put in its proper place the time server and the coy jobber to prejudice.

"It will enable the whole public to see where the Catholic stands in relation to civic affairs.

"It will eliminate forever from public office the man who prefaces one doctrine before a religious audience and another the voters he has enjoyed have honored him with a post he has never deserved.

"It will teach our people that out of every man who says 'Lord, Lord' shall enter the kingdom of heaven, and that every man who cries race and religion is really sinning in the sight of God and religion.

"It will make the general public understand that in public affairs we want no favors, but we demand justice for all.

"It will make them also realize that we prefer a good, just, honest, square-dealing public official who is not of our race or creed to any one, no matter how Irish his name nor how Catholic his lineage, who by his acts of weak compromising with purely political chicanery proves himself unworthy of confidence.

"Stand Out in the Open."

"We want no one in the federation who is not ready and willing to follow these principles and subscribe to these principles. We detest bigotry and pettiness wherever it may be found, and we feel fully confident that for the best and most honorable citizenship we can offer a defiance more real, substantial good work than by other organization in this city. Let us stand out in the open. We are no party. But he who has the commandments of God and the Church and is faithful to Christian ideals and principles and an honest, upright citizen of this State is not a single local citizen of this State who will not rejoice that our federation has at least arisen which will hold men to their promises.

"The government of each State and city must, if it is to command our respect and independence, be important to the highest degree, moral as well as intellectual, without blemish or reproach, both of individual liberty and the rights of the public, and in accordance with common science.

"In these days when money and all it can purchase is struggling for complete mastery over every phase of human life, stand forth in your honest poverty and meet the fight face to face with the fearless courage. Let no false claims based chiefly on mere pretence affect your determination to know every man by his own merits. Huddled in the greatest crowd in all the world when men by such a panic as that of a few days ago a great merchant announced that most if not all were acquired by speculation, we all knew that before—but it is interesting to hear it from the lips of one who admits that he has been guilty himself.

Wealth May Be a Curse.

"We have no quarrel with the rich who are worthy of their endowments—who remember that they are only stewards of God's goodness, who use their lives and who help those in need. We honor all such. Wealth in such hands is a blessing to any nation.

"We are Catholics—not communists.

ROOT ORDERS WAR RENEWED ON WOODRUFF

NEW YORK, March 14.—Senator Elihu Root today gave his final orders for the fight on Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican state committee, in a conference with Lloyd C. Griscom, the new chairman of the county committee. Mr. Griscom was an early visitor at the senator's home, No. 15 Park avenue.

Although nothing was admitted by either party to the meeting, it was said definitely that Senator Root, speaking for the National Republican leadership and the administration, mapped out the campaign on the lines now declared war on the administration by the retiring Senator Joseph H. Cobb in his final Republican Senate leader at Albany.

Mr. Woodruff today continued to remain out of the city, after conferring with Root with one phrase: "Ask Root."

He appeared to be very much pleased when Senator Root's home last night.

It was indicated today that Woodruff will remain in the secondary in spite of the intervention of Washington, and that the Republican State committee will not force his opponents that no drastic action against Woodruff will be taken.

It is known that the national leaders have not abandoned their opposition to the selecting the successor of the reactionary state chairman, the governor of Governor Hughes to be necessary to Republican victory at the next election, one of the difficulties of the Washington leaders is to find a man to succeed Woodruff.

John F. Ahearn, Republican candidate for Mayor at the last municipal election, is mentioned today as one of the leading men, and George B. Cortelyou, who was also suggested for Governor in the stand that he is through with politics.

OIL TRUST IN FIGHT FOR LIFE BEFORE COURT

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The greatest trust in the world began its fight for life today before the highest tribunal in the United States, when arguments were commenced in the United States Supreme Court on the appeal of the Standard Oil Company from the decision of the United States Circuit Court, ordering its dissolution. Attorney John G. Milburn opened the argument.

The Court of the Eastern District of Missouri ordered the dissolution of the corporation as an illegal combination and monopoly in restraint of interstate commerce.

This is one of the most important cases ever brought before the highest tribunal in the land. Its decision is of momentous interest to all corporations, particularly the so-called trusts, for it is the general opinion that the decision in the Tobacco trust case, already argued before the Supreme Court, will be the final test as to the validity of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Shows Government's Power.

Besides the far-reaching issues involved, which is, in effect, whether or not the government can curb the trusts under present laws, or is powerless to do so, the outcome has a national interest, because of the personality of the leaders of finance who built up the great Standard Oil, from the immense amount of capital involved in the contest.

Some of the greatest legal minds in the country began the battle for the dissolution of the company. The government is represented by Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Frank B. Kellogg, "trust-busters par excellence," Charles B. Morrison and C. A. Severance, special assistant to the Department of Justice.

Battle for Trust.

For the company appeared John G. Johnson of Philadelphia, John O. Millburn of Buffalo and David T. Watson of Pittsburg. The Standard Oil brief was written by Frank J. Goodnow of Baltimore, assisted by John M. Freeman and Ernest C. Irvin, both of Pittsburg. The evidence fills twenty-three huge volumes.

The suit in the Circuit Court was a proceeding to dissolve the company under the provisions of the Sherman act, the lower court having held that it did business in restraint of trade. The lower court enjoined the company and thirty-six principal corporations from engaging in interstate commerce during the continuance of the illegal combination. The government claims that the company is a monopoly under the meaning of the Sherman act. The Standard Oil denies all of the government's contentions. The arguments are expected to continue for three days.

RUSSELL'S NEW OPERA STATUS IS CONFIRMED

To exclusive story in the AMERICAN last Tuesday that Henry Russell had been slated for the future management of the Metropolitan Opera Company is now partly confirmed by an official announcement from the Metropolitan Opera Board of Directors appointing Mr. Russell advisory associate to the Metropolitan Opera Company, while Gatti-Casazza is nominated to the post of advisory associate to the Boston Opera Company.

The directors say further that no joint management is contemplated, and the two companies and their managements will remain entirely independent.

It was not to be expected that the Metropolitan directors would admit the intention of ousting Gatti-Casazza before they were ready to act, and it must be remembered that the dismissal of Dippel was denied by them until the last moment.

Mr. Russell, who was in New York yesterday, declared that he wished it understood that the new arrangement should not be regarded as a sort of back door entrance by himself into the Metropolitan Opera House. "I am more than contented with my place in Boston," he added.

Under the present arrangement the Boston, Metropolitan and Chicago companies will be managed under an agreement which will prevent ruinous competition for singers and result in a scaling down of the enormous salaries paid artists at present.

"There seems no reason why foreign singers should demand outrageous salaries as a condition for their appearance over 100 American boards," said Mr. Russell in connection with the announcement.

"I think it only reasonable that an artist should receive say 25 per cent more than their services are worth in Europe. Another economy should be the suppression of the foreign claque directed by Italians whom artists are engaged. The American opera houses should have agents of their own."

On being told the latest action of the Metropolitan Oscar Hammerstein issued the following:

"At a meeting of the non-advisory directors of the Manhattan opera-house they unanimously appointed almost illadvisory director of the Manhattan opera-house and local advisory director of Philadelphia Opera House with the privilege of wearing a straitjacket at an advanced salary.

GRAND TRUNK'S FINISH FIGHT

PROVIDENCE, March 14.—The real battle between the Grand Trunk and the New Haven roads will come to-morrow at the State House when President Buckland of the New Haven appears to oppose the granting of a charter to the Grand Trunk to enter Rhode Island.

The Grand Trunk, as the Southern New England Railway Company, has won its way thus far and seems about to get its charter. It wishes to make a fight against its great American port. The State Federation of Labor has approved of the Grand Trunk's plan, and commercial organizations throughout the State have joined the federation to grant the charter. The only opposition is the New Haven.

The work of the lobby against the Grand Trunk has failed. As a last resort Fred T. Mellen, and Vice-President Buckland will make their plea before the House Committee on Incorporations to-night. President Elishuch and a party of Grand Trunk officials will be present, and the meeting will take on the form of a joint debate.

NEVER ACCEPT A SUBSTITUTE

LETTER SHOWS LOST HOPE OF LIFE-CONVICT

William C. Howard, the regular army soldier, who was found guilty of murdering his wife near Fort Rodman, New Bedford, in 1908, has written a letter to his lawyer from his cell in Charlestown Prison, asking if it is true that he must serve his life sentence. Recently the Supreme Court overruled the exception of Howard's lawyers asking for a new trial, and this decision means the doom of life imprisonment for Howard.

The letter, showing the thoughts of a man who has just learned that all hope for a new trial for him is at an end, is as follows:

Dear Sir:

As I have not heard from you or Mr. Morton, I will write you a few lines now as I would like to hear how things are coming out. You may have good news for me, but I must bear it whatever it is. I haven't heard from Attorney Reddin for a long time, and I have received some postals, but I do not know for sure. Mr. Morton, who asked you to send me best wishes I wish you would convey the same to him. I ask if a Christmas present was received. I was glad to have any one send their regards to me. Tell all who may ask about me that I am well, and that I have not missed a day at hard labor since I have been here.

In fact, the work is the only thing I like in here. I am busy just now fixing up my room for housekeeping. There is only one thing I am sorry for, and you can easily guess what that is.

If anything is due me on my money and articles that the police have of mine. They can keep the suit and the soldier's hand book and other stuff to me. Notify John Reilly that Fred Redgate is not using my watch and charm and I will send for them. Tell him I have not heard from him yet, but understood that he was arrested some time ago for assault and then let go for the want of a complaint against it. I think is so others could commit a murder and be let go for the part they played against me.

Tell Mrs. Sherwood to come down and send my future, as I should like very much to know what it is to be. I will close now, as it is 9 o'clock at night. I would like to tell her and many others just what God has in store for them.

Good-by, world and to hear from you and will close now.

Yours as ever,

WILLIAM C. HOWARD.

CARPET SHOPS OPEN, BUT GIRLS STAY ON STRIKE

After a two weeks' shutdown, which was planned as a lockout to striking girl weavers, the Roxbury Carpet Company reopened its plant to-day for a vain effort to get the girls back to the looms. The girls formed a union during the lockout and now they will fight to a finish.

When it was seen that the 118 strikers had not return the management tried to get two loom-fixers and boarders to take the girls' jobs, saying that only men would be employed in the weaving department hereafter. The plan refused. A result the looms are still idle and the only department running to-day in the big plant was the dyeing room.

Five weeks ago eighteen velvet weavers struck when their pay was cut from 8 cents to 3½ cents a yard. Three weeks later 100 girl tapestry weavers quit work in sympathy.

On the same day the entire plant was shut down. It was given out the lack of work was the cause.

Far from being intimidated, the girls formed a union. They organized with 117 out of the 118 girls as members. One girl said that she had objections to joining a union, for she preferred to stay at home as long as there was a strike on in her department. She would not go back to work.

The striking girls met to-day at the headquarters of the Women's Trades Union League, No. 7 Warrenton street. They addressed by Secretary Michael A. Murphy of the Boston Central Labor Union, who has been in charge of the strike for the textile council. President Murphy said that they had all the moral funds and were told that they could stick it out for a week, but they must get help. He was assured that the girls were in earnest and would not go back till the wage was restored.

President Harry C. Jennings of the Textile Council and Secretary Connell, who happened to be with President Murphy, also addressed the girls.

NEED $5,000,000 FOR BAY STATE EXPENSES

The outlook is for a State budget of $2,000,000 for the next fiscal year, an increase of $500,000 over the amount of this year's budget, according to Chairman James A. White of the Legislative Committee on Ways and Means. Extraordinary expenses in the State departments are said to be responsible for the increase. This would take the rate of increasing the Boston tax rate by 15 cents on each $1,000.

DOVES START FOR SOUTHERN CAMP TO BEGIN WORK

SPEED BOYS IN FIRST LINE UP PRACTICE FOR GAMES WITH THE REDS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 14.—Manager Donovan had his hands full with his squad today. It was a pretty fair load of ribbons that went out to the Red Sox yard for practice. All were there, including a couple of recruits, Outfielder Speaker, centre fielder, and Pitcher Anderson. The latter was supposed to come along with McIlveen's bunch, but he was lost in the shuffle somehow. As for Speaker, this player led the Speed Boys in batting last season, hitting for somewhere around 400. He got a nice raise in salary for his good work. This has been excused of being willing to play to the ground stand a bit rod it may be that he wants to arrive when the limelight is centered upon him. Then again, maybe he doesn't. But he only lives about 200 miles from here and has had all Winter to pack his trunk and buy his ticket for Hot Springs. Donovan wants him and he ought to be here. Maybe he has a good excuse and maybe he hasn't. Anyway, he will be warmly welcomed when he does show up.

Things looked mighty familiar when Jake Stahl went to the initial bag for first practice and when Hiitle Andy McConnell drew on his glove and walked over to second, and when Heinie Wagner took his old place at short field and when Captain Harry Lord spat on his hands and prepared to stop a practice grounder. The uniforms they wore were in every variety the club has owned for the past four years, but the viewer inferred that the Red Sox looked good to those eyes in spite of the 1907 shirt, 1908 pants and the year 09 cap worn by Wagner.

The trouble Donovan had was to keep the new arrivals down to a walk. You saw the other fellows, who have been out a week, doing some fighting stuff that they wished to do likewise, forgetting the fact that it was their first work-out of the year.

Heinie Opens Up.

"Hey, there, Heinie. Do you think this is the fourth of July?" yelled Donovan to Wagner, the husky short stop, when he burned a fast one over to Stahl. "Keep 'em easy there, old boy. Don't think we are helping the batters."

Heinie grinned, but found it hard work to obey orders. It is the same every year with Wagner. He wants to show his arm off the first day out. He has a wonderful whip as every Boston fan knows, but so has Ferris when he gets warmed up the tons. Now Hobe's arm is gone.

Bullet Jack Thoney put on a uniform and went out with the boys. "You can't keep me out of it this year, he said with a big manager. "All I need is a little strength."

"That's all right, Jack, but don't monkey with that wing of yours. For the love of Mike don't use any speed with it down here. I'll give you plenty of time to get ready," was Donovan's reply.

Big Bill Carrigan showed up with less beef than the critics expected to find and he must have worked Bill pretty hard last year and he may be given the same kind of a done this season. It all depends on Bill continues to swat the ball the way he did in Dixie. Donovan will be both to let him warm the bones.

"Rough" as he is familiarly called by his team mates, is the most easy-going and good-natured player in the Red Sox outfit. He pulled on his big mitt this morning and began taking some of the hot shot delivered by pitchers and Stahl. He had been playing ball all Winter instead of selling groceries in Salt Lake City.

Wood Burns Them.

"Let 'em come," he roared to Wood. "You can't make me quit."

Little Andy McConnell coveted around second base to the old familiar style. Donovan didn't have to admonish him for being careless. He got down to real business in a careful manner. With Foor-werm's assistance he kept the ball moving.

"I weigh 165 pounds now," said the little fellow, "and I am going to get down to my weight if I carry in the regular. I took the little rest and now I feel that I am not weakened me. So I will have them along this Spring. I am going to try and I will have both in a hunk. What I had last season and never felt strong enough to think I could get them over. I am going again and I'm going to try my best to do so. I can't tell you more than that, but I can tell you."

Big Jake Stahl brought his wife down with him, he being the only player in the Red Sox party traveling with a better half. Jake put right on first base as soon as he got here and he was there all day, as though Bradley and Hap Myers were in conference.

While Myers and Bradley are first baseman nowadays thinks of a utility man at the bag, a change to Jake at the drop of the hat. Only on account of Spring practice will style citing it are any chances of a change to shine. Bradley was with Worcester for several seasons. He is supposed that the Red Sox can well afford to have his death here and look him over. Jake will be given some other minor league club this year for more development. The same will be true of both of the players understand this. It is the future the Red Sox manager has in looking forward to.

Thoney received the congratulations of

This remarkable action picture shows Wolgast getting up afterbeing floored for the count in the twenty-second round. Nelson almost won at this stage, but Wolgast came back strong in the twenty-fifth round and won easily threafter.

PICTURES AT COLUMBIA PROVE WOLGAST WINNER

The Sid Hesterized motion picturesof the Wolgast-Nelson fight that saw the making and unmaking of a champion near San Francisco on Washington's Birthday were thrown on a screen for the first time in Boston at the Columbia Theatre this afternoon. Fight writers have trie dto explain that this was the fastest and most vicious battle ever waged. They have only half expressed the case. It is all that and more. Only fifteen of the best rounds are shown, but one comes away with a feeling of weariness: not because the pictures are uninteresting—far from it—but in open-eyed wonderment that flesh and blood could stand the terrific pace set by these lads for forty crashing periods.

The picture is on hour in the showing, principally because Sid Hester, who put the fight on the slate, is good, very good proud of it. There are scenes at the training camps, with Hester superintending things; pictures of Hester talking to a friend; even a picture of Hester's cook friend; even a picture of Hester's cook-dent in a velvet collar and eyeglasses, talking to himself. "Sid Hester presents." And Hester's arena and other set pieces of ringside and museum are scattered through the entire length of the film, a prompter who thinks well of himself.

Show Ad Worthy Champion.

But the films of the best itself more than make up for the impossible introduction. They show, for one thing, that Wolgast is a worthy champion, and they will please Nelson's admirers from the very fact that even in the last round, when ring up this story to affect the betting; said Joe, "but I am merely stating the fact; the injury was not serious at all and I have bought a new set of gloves and ones that will suit me better.

There was nothing in Sam's afternoon workout that would indicate that his wrist was giving him any pain. The negro fought twelve rounds with his trainer, Kid Brown fought each with Bob Armstrong, Artie Collins, Geo. Byers and Young Feeney.

KETCHEL CANNOT GO TO COAST AND FIGHT LANGFORD

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—Jim Griffin's effort to bring Stanley Ketchel and Sam Langford together in this city on Monday or Tuesday night next, with the July 2 purse brought to an end yesterday when Griffin received a telegram from the middleweight champion, stating that he could not come out here and look that same Ketchel is at Hot Springs, Ark., training for his fight with Frank Klaus at Pittsburg on March 25.

Griffin will devote his attention to getting Al Wolgast and Freddie Welsh to prove the attraction of the date which is to precede the Jeffries-Johnson match.

Ben Selig yesterday announced that he had made arrangements with Joe Jeanette as manager for Abe Attell, and that he would make all of the clever boxer's matches in the near future.

LANGFORD INJURES HAND TRAINING FOR JIM FLYNN

LOS ANGELES, March 14.—Several things occurred yesterday to increase interest in Jim Flynn-Sam Langford battle, which is scheduled for forty-five rounds before Uncle A. C. at Vernon next Thursday afternoon. In the first place both Flynn and Langford drew hundreds of fight fans to their training camps in the afternoon, looking for a line on the battle.

Secondly, Joe Woodman came through with a semi announcement to the effect that Langford had suffered an injury to a finger one of his hands. A late bulletin from the fight headquarters conveyed the information that a tangle existed over the moving picture proposition and that the possibility of the films not being taken was worrying both Mervyn and Woodman.

Fully sixteen hundred spectators were crowded about the open rink at Doyle's when Flynn started work at 5 o'clock. Flynn, who is in almost perfect fighting condition now, went through his paces and sent so much as drawing a long breath. It is Flynn who has been holding up the film project. The Colorado battler has some distinct ideas of his own as to just how the picture end of the fight should be staged.

Jim is coming into the city for a conversation with McCarey and Woodman, and the affair will be definitely settled.

Langford, charging an admission of 50 cents a piece, drew between seven and eight hundred people to his remote camp in Arcadia yesterday. Sam, like Flynn, had hurt his right wrist while wrestling with Bobo Armstrong.

"I suppose it will charged up with stiffness," he said, "but I am merely stating the fact; the injury was not serious at all and I have bought a new set of gloves and ones that will suit me better.

There was nothing in Sam's afternoon workout that would indicate that his wrist was giving him any pain. The negro fought twelve rounds with his trainer, Kid Brown fought each with Bob Armstrong, Artie Collins, Geo. Byers and Young Feeney.

TECH ISSUES CALL FOR VARSITY CREW

It was officially announced at Tech this morning that the institution will have a varsity crew. The first call for candidates was issued and many reported. The work of President Machurin is the only thing responsible for the crew, for when he went on his recent Western trip he asked the Chicago Alumni Association for the support of a crew, and within a short time enough money was raised by the 200 graduates present to furnish shells and a coach for the first year, and the alumni will keep the crew together.

The Talen Boat Club has contributed its machines and quarters to the candidates. A temporary captain and manager was elected this morning. It is in doubt whether any races will be held this season as necessary time spent in training. Tech has a wealth of material and a very good crew should be turned out.

FAST NOTRE DAMES AFTER BALL GAMES

There is class to the management of the Notre Dame baseball team, that star aggregation over in South Boston, at Tommy Fitzpatrick, the 125-pound national boxing champion, is directing its affairs. He has secured some crack diamond players. He has Brady the first baseman, Sullivan, pitcher, and Boyce, a catcher from the Whittinsville team.

Manager Fitz has arranged games by addressing Thomas F. Fitzpatrick, No. 125 F street, South Boston.

JACK JOHNSON IN AUTO SMASH

RACINE, Wis., March 14.—Jack Johnson, the colored champion, narrowly escaped death here when on his way from Milwaukee to Chicago in an automobile. He and his wife were nine miles north of Racine when the machine which Johnson was driving suddenly swerved at a muddy spot in the road and plunged him into a bank of snow which still survived from the Winter's blizzards.

The machine was overturned before Johnson and his wife could jump and the two were thrown out violently. Both sustained many bruises, but were not badly injured.

Johnson and his wife went on to Chicago by rail today. The machine had to be left in a repair shop here. "It's worse than being arrested," was Johnson's comment. "I was most frightened to death."

NO FUTURITIES FOR CRABTREE

Jack Crabtree has decided views about the training of colts. "Never again," said he in discussing the early development of trotting horses, "will I enter one of my mares in a futurity stake.

"In the first place I'm not breeding to sell, but even if I were, I'd never enter my colts in stakes, as I would want to keep the purchaser a real horse, and not a prize package composed of a no-account trotter with $50,000 worth of stakes in front of him that he had not a ghost of a show of getting a piece in.

"I do not believe in racing trotters until they are at least five years old, and believe that I will be well repaid for waiting until the trotters of my breeding are fully developed before putting them into active training."

More AMERICANS are read in the homes in Boston than any other paper.

BOXING BOUTS AT WARE CLUB

WARE, March 14.—The Ware Athletic Club will hold a boxing, wrestling and club swinging exhibition in the Town Hall Thursday night, March 31. The exhibition will be free to members who join the required length of time before the exhibition takes place.

R. A. Marshall of Boston will give an exhibition of club swinging. Walter M. Larkin of New Haven, and J. B. McCarthy of Manchester will wrestle. There will be three boxing bouts. The preliminary bout will be four rounds between "Kid" Lacasse of Ware and Kid Ryan of Boston. The semi-final bout will be between "Young" Cassidy of Cambridge and "Kid" Young of Ludlow. They will box four rounds for the colored bantam championship of New England. The final bout will be a six-round affair between what will be "Savage" Phillips of Brockton and Von Hagen of Springfield. Arrangements will be made to have special cars to Springfield, Palmer, Thorndike, Sherville, and the Warrens and Brookfields after the show.

FASTER COLT THAN COCHATO

Millard Delnkwater will have a choice lot of youngsters to take to the Readville track a little later in the season.

Both Millard and his father, Colonel A. C. Drinkwater, believe in keeping young horses fat and healthy during the winter months and not burning them to much at the beginning of the training season.

However, Millard says that he has something a good deal better than 2:11½ out of May Day Medium, 2:18¾, enough to show that he is the most promising youngster of his age that he has ever trained, not excepting the colt's sire.

HAVERHILL KENNEL SHOW IN APRIL

The Haverhill Kennel Club will hold a dog show at the hippodrome, Haverhill, on April 14 and 15. Entries close April 2. This has been a three-point show and they hope to make it the same again. The building that it is to be held in is a new one, and one of the finest in New England.

Arnold Lawson will judge bull dogs and English toy spaniels. A. M. Tuckie will judge English, Irish and Gordon setters, M. T. Mason will judge pointers and cocker hounds and beagles. George S. Thomas will judge all other breeds.

SIDNEY FIGHTS TO-NIGHT.

Fred Sidney, the Boston colored lightweight, who is in England, fights Young Daniels a fifteen-round contest to-night at the National Sporting Club. Sidney has fought fourteen times since going to England and only lost once, and then to a middleweight.

DOVES START FOR SOUTHERN TRAINING CAMP

Manager Lake, accompanied by Dave Sheehan, Billy Burke, the former Notre Dame outfielder, Jimmy O'Connell and Trainer Neary, with the war correspondents, will make up the party which goes to Augusta, Ga., to spend two weeks of the hardest kind of training, as the practice season has been shortened, which means more activity while it lasts.

To-morrow morning some more Doves will join the bunch, Pitcher Al Mattern, Chick Evans and Wolfgang, the new pitcher with the funny name, and Tom Tuckey, Moran, Providence outfielder last year, will jump on the train at Philadelphia and then it will be straight for the camp, which is due to be reached by Wednesday morning.

President Dovey is in Cincinnati getting together the forces that live in that section, and will get underway and get to the Southern training spot before the Eastern delegation. He will have with him: Catchers, Harry Smith of Massillon, O.; William Raider of Bedford, Ind.; George F. Graham of Minneapolis, Minn. Pitchers, Edward Cole of Delaware, O.; Charles E. Brown of Onawa, Ia.; Forrest T. Moore of North Tonawanda, N.Y.; Willis Hudlin of Cadiz, O.; Fred Beck of Havana, Ill.; first baseman, William J. Feeney of Providence, R.I.; shortstop; Gus Getz of Allegheny, Pa., and utility outfielder; Hosea J. Siner of Shelburne, Ind., utility infielder; Frank B. Lisse of Beloit, Wis., centre field; Beals Becker of Wichita, Kans., right field.

Secretary Peter Kelly was very busy today in having been many days back shoveling out the mail that had piled up in the Paddock Building.

Barney Joy, a pitcher from Honolulu, whom the Doves drafted from the San Francisco Club of the Pacific Coast League in 1907, after he had burned up the league by his great work, sent in a signed contract and asked for transportation to the training camp.

Joy has been a holdout since the time he was shoved into the big league, but the Doves have always had a string on him and sent him a contract each year. The transportation matter will be put up to President John Dovey and if he sees fit he will send him.

Siner, who was purchased last season from the Monmouth team of Illinois, has been sold back to the same team and Cecil Ferguson, another pitcher, signed in his signed contract for the coming season.

AUTO DEALERS HAPPY OVER MANY SALES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The Boston motor show is a thing of the past, and within a couple of days nothing save the memory thereof will be left. The work of dismantling the exhibits was undertaken immediately upon the close of the show on Saturday evening, and yesterday there were a great many cars on the road which had been on exhibition in the show.

A great many of the dealers had during the past week disposed of their exhibit cars, the owners of which were on hand at the close of the show in order to drive them home, and yesterday they enjoyed their first run in their new possession.

Early this morning all of the dealers or their representatives were on hand to superintend the removal of the cars and other exhibits, and so expeditiously was this done that by the noon hour all of the cars were out of the building, and Manager Chester L. Campbell and his crew were left to undisputed possession thereof.

The work of bringing the show to a close was then the work of construction, and yet it entails a great amount of hard and steady work, for not only must the exhibits be packed, but all of the temporary structures, the apple orchard, the Italian pergola and the decorations in general must be removed and the hall left in fully as good condition as it was before the motor show was held in it. This, however, is being rapidly accomplished, and by to-morrow everything will have been finished.

"In sending the Gliddon tour, as was done last year and will be done again this season, through territory to which the automobile is practically new, the American Automobile Association has, I think, most commendably added impetus to the industry," says Hugh Chalmers, president and general manager of the Chalmers Motor Co. "We who are in the industry and all of the great host of automobile users know that the motor car is a practical means of transportation in any kind of country where a railroad or a horse can go. The general use of the automobile among the farmers of the East and Middle West has demonstrated its practicability for agricultural uses.

THIS IS THE BEST AD I EVER WROTE

MELVIN WILLIAMS

When you read the heading to this ad you thought I was trying to boost my own effort by overboosting it, didn't you? No such object. I just wanted to catch your eye for a second till I could get your ear for a couple of minutes. I want to tell you about Gale & Kent, the 96 Court Street tailoring firm.

I can't tell the entire story in one short advertisement. In fact, I've been talking Gale & Kent for three years and have yet to reach the end of my argument about their ability as tailors.

One reason is because they are always improving their shop. They have been 18 years in business at the same place—96 Court Street—and they have developed the very finest system of buying goods and trimmings, designing clothes, making coats, vests, pants, in separate rooms, trying on all garments and finishing their product of any firm in Boston.

Their prices for suit or overcoat are $15 to $25—depending on the difference in price of cloth and trimmings. The work put into a $15 Suit at Gale & Kent's is the same as the work put into a $25 Suit.

Another feature at 96 Court Street that is exclusive is their famous method of coat building—"The-front-that-won't-break-down." The design is registered at the State House in Boston as Gale & Kent's trademark. All infringements will be punished, legally.

Easter is a week from Sunday, and I suggest that you call at 96 Court Street right away and choose the goods for your suit or overcoat or both. The measuring can be done, the pattern draughted, and the suit be ready for you in a few days. The finishing will be a couple of days more unless you are in a big hurry, when things will be rushed along for you.

Everything sent out by Gale & Kent, whether $15 or any price up to $25, is guaranteed absolutely as to style, fit, wear and workmanship.

If you answer this invitation and get a suit at 96 Court Street, calling day or evening, you may feel like telling your friends, after you get the suit, that it was "the best ad I ever saw."

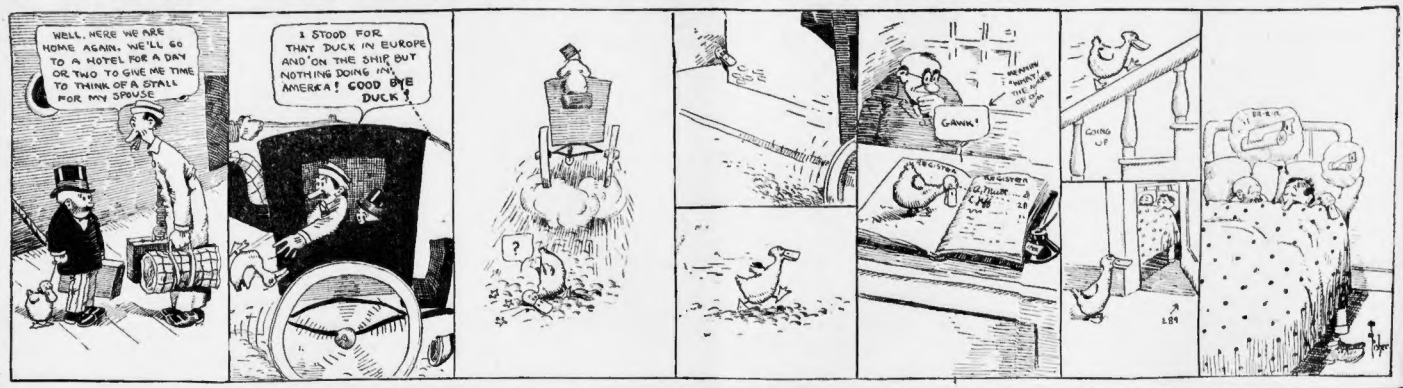
Mutt and Jeff Land in New York; So Does Clarice—By "Bud" Fisher



GIVE SOME RAW DECISIONS IN ENGLISH RING

The fighting game is pretty quiet over in England, according to a letter that Otis Fortune, manager of Fred Sidney of Boston, sends to the BOSTON AMERICAN. He says:

"Everything is quiet in England just at present and there isn't much money around for any of the boys except heavyweights. Bert Keyes of New York is in Paris loafing. Packey McFarland can't draw Freddie Welsh into the ring at any price over here. Yankee Schwartz made good over in Paris, and as there was no more money there he went home. Fred Sidney has cleaned up all of his men and it is hard work for him to get anybody to meet him. He has only lost one in fourteen and that to Joe Heathcote, a middleweight, in twenty rounds. Heathcote had a call forty pounds on Fred.

"They talk about the decisions given in America to English boxers, but they give a few raw ones over here. Whoever the money is on, the fighter must win. Sidney has got three of these kind of decisions. Schwartz one in Paris, Bart Connolly got one in Newcastle, Harry Lewis beat Willie Lewis in Paris by a mile and they called it a draw.

"Money is looked in for four more fights and then for America for ours and we will be back by May 1."

WOLGAST HAD HARD ROAD TO TRAVEL

Wolgast, lightweight champion boxer of the world, had a hard road to travel a few years ago, according to Tom Struble, of Kewaunee, Mich., who is one of the great-day hero of the pugilistic world in fast chance to make money. Struble first knew Wolgast back in 1906, and this is the story Struble tells of Wolgast's first appearance in the ring:

"I was running a buffet in Petoskey, Mich., when one day in 1906 a little chap dropped into town and hooked me up. He told his name was Wolgast, and that he had a home from his home at Cadillac, on his blind baggage, not having money enough to pay carfare. He was about fourteen years old at the time, and weighed 118 pounds. He informed me that he was looking for a fight to show what he could do in the ring.

"I secured a nervy little guy, but I had no one on hand that was anywhere near his weight, and told him so.

"I don't care about the weight,' he replied, 'anyone will do me.'

"I had staged quite a number of bouts at Petoskey, but at that time the only one I had available for any kind of a match was a fellow named Ernie Moore, a very clever chap with the mitts who showed shows regularly and fought when the opportunity was offered. But Moore weighed around 160 pounds, being forty pounds heavier than Wolgast.

"I told the boy about that, but he quickly replied: 'I don't care about the forty pounds; bring on your man. I have got to have a fight and get the money in a hurry.'

"The match was put on, and the way Wolgast sailed into Moore was a fright. He knocked his man down so many times that I thought sure he would either kill himself or Moore by his exertions, and finally in the sixth round I called the fight and Wolgast was declared the winner and got for his efforts just a little over $5. But that seemed to suit him, for he was able to ride back home.

"I saw Wolgast in action several times that year, and his development was marvelous. Of his thirteen fights he won twelve, eight of them being ninth knock-outs.

"He was defeated by Young Nelson in four rounds, but the next time the two met Wolgast beat Nelson in three rounds."

FOR SPORT FANS

THERE WILL BE BOXING IN LARGE bunches at the Armory Club tomorrow night, when the classiest card yet framed up by Matchmaker Johnny Mooney is to be pulled off. A show of four all star bouts is quite an innovation, but the card of last week pleased the club members so much that Mooney decided to try it again. And at that, isn't eight round long enough bout? It strikes me that I would rather see four good bouts of this length, than one good twelve-round mill and three between youngsters who know less of the game.

The bout between Jimmy Walsh and Al Delmont is the class of the card, and it looks to me as if the one best bet in Walsh tonight. Delmont's showing in his recent bouts has not been of the best, but even at his best I believe Walsh can beat him.

Another bout that is attracting a great deal of attention is the go between Tommy O'Keefe and Frank Perron. The Philadelphia boy has made a good impression by his two fights here, but this time he is giving away so much weight that he will have to extend himself to the limit to win, or I miss my guess. O'Keefe is a lightweight while Perron is a welter, and a good heavy one at that. If Perron loses it will give O'Keefe a big boost, and go a long ways towards bringing out the first impression many of the local fans got of him on his first appearance here—that he had the making of a champion if taken along right. It's up to the Armory should book O'Keefe up with some one nearer his own weight.

NOW WE WILL TAKE A LOOK AT those pictures of the Wolgast-Nelson fight which are being shown at the Columbia, and see for ourselves exactly why Bat lost the title and not the money we bet on him. Neil Dunn, one of the brightest lights in the Golden Gate's sporting firmament, brought the picture to Boston Saturday, and after spending an entire day with the old fogies who grant moving picture licenses, managed to pursuade them that the town wouldn't be burnt up by Nelson in showing them. A special showing of the pictures will be given at the Columbia this morning for the Boston sporting writers, and I'm going to take a look.

THERE will be great doings in South Boston Wednesday night when the Roxbury Athletics and the Notre Dames play the second game of their series for the championship of the city. The battle will take place in Spellman Hall. I have been cordially invited to attend this game, and, being the night before the 17th, I don't suppose I would be received cordially if I went with a yellow flower in the lapel of my coat.

Manager Litchfield of the Roxbury aggregation informs me that his team will not appear in their regular suits, which are red and gray, the colors of their club, but will wear green suits instead for that night's game. Very patriotic on the part of the Roxbury Athletics. What?

DIDN'T IT WARM THE COCKLES OF your heart to see the account of those baseball games played in the South Saturday? The representatives of Boston didn't figure any to speak of, but the Red Sox got down to business Wednesday, when they open a long series with the Cincinnati Reds at Hot Springs. There are quite a few anxious young ball players down there in Arkansas just now, and these games will do much toward settling their fate—decidedly whether they stay in fast company or hike back to the bushes.

BY THE WAY, SPEAKING OF BASEball, I see in one of the Sunday papers that "Fred Lake's faith will fill the Down" in the race for the pennant. This faith lifting business is great stuff, but a casual glance at the roster of the Boston Nationals leads me to believe that Mr. Lake would do well to have a little something more than faith to do the uplifting with. I'm strong for John Dovey, and I'm strong for Fred Lake. They both deserve a lot more than they are likely to get this year, but I'm taking a hard squeeze for the new manager to add a lot of "woops" in the shape of new players to his aggregation. They tell me that faith without works doesn't get anywhere much.

SURELY FAME IS A FICKLE AND vanishing thing. Now that Bat Nelson has lost his title, it's up to everyone who feels like it to take a rap at him. When the June was champion, I thought he was a pretty good scrapper, but if I am to believe such letters as the following I figure he never should have been allowed to get in the prelim ranks. But I don't believe them:

Sinful Dope, Boston American:
Dear Sir—In several occasions I have noticed where rinkydinkers have placed Bat Nelson as the greatest fighter I ranked against him. Of course every man has a right to his opinion, but I can't see where Bat Nelson was the champion fighter of the prize ring from the time of the first ring battle. Why, I can't see where Nelson should ever receive any credit for taking poor old Battling Nelson's title away from him. Nelson was years and years past the time he should have retired, and I thought sure that Bat would have done so after he had defeated Battling Nelson. Gans had to have himself to make for what dominated by a few dollars, and it was very evident that it was not the Dane's fighting ability that got the title for him, but his unique and unconventional methods. Why, Nelson could have defeated Gans with his hands tied, and if Nelson had fought the first twenty-three rounds to a draw, as he did with Gans, and Battling Nelson, who he had been dodging, Wolgast was the only good man that he fought of the late lightweight limit. Gans had the class, but Nelson would not fight him unless Gans agreed to a long-distance affair. Gans and Battling Nelson fought a long-drawn-out affair, and then were matched to fight each other, and then Gans signed everything in their respective classes, they went nothing short of a knock-out, so long for the last days of the game that Wolgast will father have enough of Gans to call the one set to Bat Nelson. Hoping to see this in print and thanking you in advance, I remain a reader of your colossal.

Gallineau of Ladder No. 14, for the running championship of the B. F. D., and a purse of $1,000. The event is to take place at the American League grounds. Tickets may be procured by applying to Charles A. Mack, who is the official matchmaker for the B. F. D.

OUR OLD FRIEND JIMMA DE JEFF, who is billed to argue matters with a colored individual named Johnson next July, goes on record as saying that "the girls, old and young, should be given the right to box and vote." After reading this it doesn't take a very big stretch of the imagination to picture the big Californian as a suffragette. And say, wouldn't the skirts that belong to the militant section of that gang give the big fellow a heart welcome? Jeff carrying a "votes for women" banner and trailing along with a bunch of hens! Great picture isn't it?

CY YOUNG SAYS RED SOX WILL BE IN THE HUNT

HOT SPRINGS, March 14.—Veteran Cy Young has sized up his former team mates and believes the Red Sox are stronger than ever.

"The club is very fast," said he, "and has a fine bunch of young players who know a lot of baseball and can pull off inside stuff. Jake Stahl should have a good year. Harry Lord is a ball player who can keep his men on the jump. You don't have to tell him what to do. He knows and does it. Heinie Wagner is one of the best in the business. He hit better last year and his season should show improvement. Amby McConnell at second is some ball player, too.

"In speaking of Tris Speaker and his wonderful work, I said: 'Getting men on the plate seems to have become a lost art.' Tris can throw from a wonderful distance and throw true to the mark, but how many other outfielders can you find who can do that thing? Very few. Taking for instance the practice given the outfielders today. The manager selects a man who can put out the fungoes a mile and the fielders chase them, but they hardly ever get a throw in to the plate. Why wouldn't it be a good scheme for manager to practice their outfielders in throwing at a mark from a reasonable distance? A fine hit to the outfield with men on bases means danger of runs.

THREE BOUTS AT QUEEN CITY

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 14.—Matchmaker Owen Kenny of the Queen City A. C. has arranged an all-star card for its members for Friday evening. Three six-round bouts are scheduled.

In the opener Kid Sheehan will meet Young O'Neil of Woonsocket. Young O'Neil recently knocked out Tommy Furey and is a promising lad. Young McDonough sees Willie Clark of Lawrence in the second, and in the final bout Oscar Martin, the boxing of the great Terry Martin, meshes with Young Fitzgerald of California.

BOSTON AMERICANS DOUBLE

Smiles Win More Than Tears

By ELLA WHEELER L.C.X

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal Examiner.

ALL contently in hours of joy
I made a song of pain.
Soon grief drew near and paused to hear
And sang the sad refrain.
Again and yet again
Then recklessly to my despair,
I sang of hope one day;
And joy turned back upon life's track,
And smiled, and came my way.
And sat her down to stay.

HOWEVER the world may have seemed to misuse you, turn a good-natured face upon humanity. However miserable you may be, sit before your mirror a few minutes every day and SMILE.

Laugh aloud when you are struggling against tears. The sound will amuse you, at least.

The great genius, Delsarte, taught the world that by cultivating a certain attitude of the body, and a certain expression of the face, the corresponding emotion would take possession of the mind.

There is a large and wonderful truth in his theory.

We are marvellous creations; and every part of the body and every inmost feeling and emotion of the soul and heart are closely related.

You will say, perhaps, that you must be honest even with yourself; that you must look as you feel, and that to smile when you are sad and to laugh when you would weep is not honest.

Yet if you knew that by putting on your sun best garment and walking into certain office you would secure a desirable position, or be given a good salary, how quickly you would do it, even though your garments did not show the public how poor you really were; even though they were not honest expressions of your poverty; even though they were borrowed.

Put Best Side Foremost

You merely put the best side of the matter forward.

Well, that is what you do, when you put on your smile, and practice your laugh.

There is a "laughing cure" for many maladies of the mind and body. People who have tried it declare it really CURES to sit before a mirror and laugh for twenty minutes a day.

After a few days of this amusing practice life begins to assume a brighter aspect; and the mind is on the alert for things to help it in its effort to laugh; and mental and physical ills are forgotten. Besides this, the people you encounter along your way will be interested in you if you smile and laugh easily, and they will soon live of you if you wear a melancholy and tragic countenance.

The man who has a hard luck story to tell whenever you meet him, and who wears a hopeless look and talks of the injustice of the world and the selfishness of humanity, may receive alms hurriedly given, but the dispensers will hasten from his presence and turn the corner when they see him coming their way the next time.

An Attitude That Repels

No employer is induced to give work to a man of that type. It is an attitude of mind which invariably repels.

Therefore, since the whole and lovable Helpers of the world are not attracted by melancholy, pessimism and gloom, it is wise, merely from the business point of view, to force smiles, to practice pleasant, sonorous manner, to talk optimism and to illumine any necessary tale of trouble and need with hopeful expectations of better times.

The man who goes into a business office with a desperate face and tells of his hard luck, and says: "Everything goes wrong for me; whatever I try to do fails; I am born to bad luck, and it is no fault of mine," that man is working against his own best interests. Instead of creating sympathy he

If he tells of his misfortunes and his woes, and then says, "Of course this state of things will pass; my luck will change; better times will come to me; but they won't begin too soon," then his listener is interested, and ten to one he will make some effort to help the hopeful soul.

Smile, laugh, stand up bravely, look at the sun instead of the dust, carry your head high and keep your chest filled with fresh air; walk like one who owns the earth—do not crawl like a worm. Your luck must change.

The Thinkophone

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

(Professor Musterberg has built a machine by which any tendency to evil in an employe can be detected by his employer.)—News Item.

HO! You gambling bank cashier, or tippling Wall Street clerk,
Who like to think of dice and drink, when you should be at work,
Who play the wheel at luncheon time or put in every noon
Disporting with the demon Rum in some downtown saloon,
In future you had better let such vanities alone,
Since Doctor Hugo Munsterberg has built his thinkophone.

It's something like a phonograph and something like a clock,
And something like a ticker which keeps cases upon stock,
And when it's set behind your desk, you'll find it quite in vain
To keep it from recording what is passing through your brain.
For instance, if that burr of booze you raptly contemplate
The thinkophone will cry, "Gin fizz for one!" or "Whiskey straight!"

And if you tot up what you lost last Tuesday at the track
And plan a little system which is sure to get it back,
The thinkophone attentively will listen to your mind
And shout, "You loser! That one to fifty shot is twenty lengths behind!"
And then the man you're working for will see a sudden light
And count the money in the safe before you leave that night.

It soon won't be advisable for office boys to tell
The boss that they must hasten home for father isn't well.
For while they're starting for the door the thinkophone will shout,
"Foul ball!" "One strike!" "Hey, swipe 'er Hans!" "Two strikes!"
and "Batter out!"
And with the cerebrations all exposed to view that way,
For one unhappy office boy there'll be no game to-day.

Three Little Heads

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IN front of me, as I write, there stands a photograph of three tiny girls.

With arms intertwined they stand, three little steps, brown, chestnut and golden the three soft heads lean toward each other.

The little brown and gold haired maids are grown into beautiful, spiritlid girlhood.

The little chestnut head has crossed the great divide. For many years the little restless feet and hands have lain at rest.

No one could look at that photograph without wondering what would become of those three baby girls. Would their lives be sad or glad, would they waste them or make the most of them? Surely every mother of a baby daughter must think wistfully of the future and look to know how her girl will fare.

Sometimes you look at a girl who has health, looks and wealth, and think cynically "How easy life is for you; it is no hardship for you to be good. You have everything to make you so."

Don't Judge Your Neighbor

But no one knows his neighbor's soul, nor what temptations dwell therein.

Don't try to judge your friend, nor to speculate on his chances for being happy and good.

Just look after your own heart and life; that is enough to keep any one person busy. We all have temptations, and each heart knows its own.

What requires all your powers of resistance might be not the smallest temptation to me. But that is no reason why I should belittle it as far as you are concerned.

No woman is free from temptations. Yours may be the passion for pretty clothes or you may long for forbidden gayety of some sort.

The surest temptation that ever comes to a woman is that of a love which she dare not accept. Some are strong enough to resist forbidden love, others are not, and the strong ones must not judge their weak sisters too harshly.

Nobody is always strong; we may win like times and fall the touch, but give us credit for all the victories, and forget the defeat.

Guiding Her Baby Feet

I read the other day, of a mother who never took her baby's soft feet in her hands without praying that the little feet would tread in safe and happy paths, free from danger of all sorts.

We are none of us free from danger, but we can try our best to be as good as possible and to lead clean, pure lives—the kind of lives that our mothers craved We should.

Remember, my girls, how all important it is that you should grow into good women.

Beauty and wit and cleverness are wonderful things in their way, and most desirable, but the one great, best quality in a woman is her goodness.

It is a serene goodness and purity that has brought the world to where it stands to-day; any man will tell you that.

Men do not understand the hundred and one small temptations that beset a woman.

The longing for pretty things, the desire to make herself look pretty in men's eyes, the longing to make her children prettily, to make her house pretty—these may seem petty desires, but they are web and woof of human nature.

The Severest Judge of Women

It is often said that the most severe judge of other women is the one who has never known temptation.

There is no woman who has not known temptation of some sort and as she expects leniency, so should she show it.

Try and conquer your own temptations and be generous to those of others.

Brothers as Matrimonial Tipsters---By Dorothy Dix

IF the man does well to take his sister's advice about the character and disposition of the woman he is contemplating marrying, a girl pretty better to submit the candidates for her heart and hand to her brother's inspection.

There is something actually pathetic in the spectacle of a poor, ignorant, innocent, unsophisticated little girl trying to pick out a husband for herself alone and unaided. What does she know about men? Nothing. Absolutely nothing. What line has she got on the ins and outs of masculine nature? None. Absolutely none. How

All of her life the little girl has been kept from knowing the things about men that men know about each other. Her brothers have carefully guarded and studiously fostered, so that she really practically knows about as much of the habits of man as she does about the habits of the jackal.

From which it naturally follows that women judge men by their external appearance, and if the man behaves kindly and quietly and decently in society some poor little gump of a girl jumps to the conclusion that he is a thoroughly tamed and domesticated animal, that will trot along in double harness and never try to break over the traces.

The darkest man of her acquaintance could tell her better. He would only have to take one look at the whites of the man's eyes to know that he was one of the untamed beasts that would kick the domestic vehicle to pieces, and that would never be cured of the bolting habit as long as he lived, and that no amount of hobbling with wife and children would ever keep him from jumping over the bars.

Therefore, it is a wise girl, who, when she finds out that her heart is beginning to do flip flops in her maiden breast, whenever the name of Mr Percy Perkinson is mentioned, goes to her big brother and asks him for a few general tips upon the kind of a gentleman that Mr. P. P. is.

Suppose brother Bob says:

"Well, little girl, I'm not saying this for general publication, for there are a lot up to the higher life. But when she tells to the bigher life. But when she tells to a thing after it gets hard. If you are going to marry him, you'd better go out and learn how to cook, or take a course in stenography, or something, for you are dead sure to have to support him."

Ah! But Suppose He Says This

But suppose the girl asks her brother's advice about Bill Graham and he says:

"Ah, that's about the right size. Not much to look at Bill, and in no danger of setting the river on fire with his brilliancy, but he's as square as they make them, and as staunch as the Rock of Gibraltar. He is generous and just, and got a heart as tender as a child's, and if you marry him he'll stand between you and the world and keep you hung the balance of your life burning love-sticks to your luck."

He is "the goods" when brother approves of him.

It's a wise girl who passes up the fortune teller and goes to her brother for advice when she is thinking of getting married.

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY

THERE are two young men of St. Louis, partners in a business concern, the younger of whom for a long time was addicted to the habit of clipping out of the other extracts from letters of a tender nature penned by a young woman of New York slumber, herself "Claire."

Not so very long after the elder partner returned from an Eastern trip in time to attend the wedding reception of his friend and business associate.

In his best manner the senior member of the firm offered his congratulations to the bride. "I do not feel that I am addressing a stranger," said he, "seeing that I have frequently had the honor and pleasure of hearing extracts from his darling Claire's letters."

"I beg your pardon," responded the bride, into whose eyes there crept a curious expression, "but my name is Violet."

Song of Summer

By KATHERINE TYNAN.

O, sweet it is in Summer,
When leaves are fair and long,
To lie amid lush, scented grass,
Where gold and gray the shadows pass,
A swift, unresting throng!
And hear low river voices
Sing o'er the shining sands,
That seem a galaxy of stars to wear
Of emerald and jacinth rare,
The work of fairy hands;
And see afar the mountains, heaven-kissed
Shine through the white rain's silvery sheeted mist.

Oh, fair the balmy morning,
When gay the sun doth ride,
And white plumes sail against the blue,
And all the land is fresh with dew,
And sweet the hay-fields wide!
Yet fairer windless evening,
When the pale vesper star
Parts her long veil of dusky hair,
And looks with gentle eyes and fair
From palaces afar,
And sings the nightingale to trancèd skies
Of love and pain and all high mysteries.

The Tenderfoot Bit on the Old Story---By Kennett Harris

"BUTTER-ROOT" HALPIN, incited by the cheers of his mates at the chuck wagon, did his best, but high-heeled, spurred boots, a gun belt and chaparejos are poor things to run in, and the Indian reached his little fleabitten, roan pony, and mounted it unscathed. A minute or two later he was not much more than a blur half way to the line of green that the cottonwoods made along the river, and "Butter-root" lurched back to the wagon, swearing in a perfunctory sort of way as he came.

"Why didn't you ping 'im, Bitter?" asked the Circle Bar Seven representative when the ironical compliments on Mr Halpin's celerity of movement were exhausted.

"Because he dropped the quirt," explained "Bitter-root," kicking the article in question at his saddle. "I certainly would have liked to have beaten him up a mess," he added regretfully, as he squatted to resume his interrupted meal.

The tenderfoot looked at the cowboy with wide-eyed awe. "Wouldn't his tribe have gone out on the warpath if you had struck him?" he inquired.

That particular branch of the beef round-up assumed an aspect of intense seriousness. The gayety of the Circle Bar Seven boy was almost alarming. "Bitter-root" was at the moment delivering a drib-bling sorghum from a gallon jug to his bis-cuit, so the red-headed cook made answer for him.

Set Whole Sioux Nation Buzzing

"They shore would, Buddy. We'd have the whole Sioux nation buzzing up to the River Inside of a week, and every tepee between Porcupine Butte and Fort Pierre would have some of our hair to ornament us by. I'd hate to say what they would have done to Bitter. But Bitter always did think more of his ridin' outfit than his hair, and if I had his violent disposition I'd try to do something for it besides sackin' it in sorghum. I'm mighty glad our reg'lar cook got back to camp in time."

"Me, too," agreed the granger from Pass Creek, who was hoping to find his mossy cow with possible increase. "Them Ogallalas is bad medicine," he added, wagging his head. "If one o' them got hooted we'd have a stiff show of lookin' natural when the soldiers got around. They'd never let up on our trail till they got us."

"Member the time they got Turtle Edwards?" asked the cook. "They tied him up an' stuck fat pitch splinters in him an' set 'em alight one by one."

"Did they kill him?" asked the horror-stricken tenderfoot.

"Why, yes, sorter, Buddy," answered the cook. "It was a sudden death under the circumstances. It only took 'em about a day and a half to finish him."

The tenderfoot shuddered.

"It reminds me of the time I thumped the big nut of old Lea Washtar for rustlin' one of the Bell yearlings," said the Circle Bar Seven boy, skidding his tinplate into the discard and groping for his tobacco sack.

"What happened then?" asked the tenderfoot.

"I Hate to Tell It," He Said

"I kind of hate to tell it," said the Circle Bar Seven boy. "It had a mighty ornery end to it. But it come about like this. Lea belonged to the old Two Ket-tle band, an' you know what kind of a op that weakly had. Well, he took it up an' he sont word by a halfbreed they called Charlie Chicken-Tracks, that he was going to give the coyotes a treat on Sunday an' use my top-knot to decorate his war shirt. I was younger in them days an' I didn't have much more sense than Bitter's got, an' I laughed. After a few months I forgot all about it an' I kept right on forgetting for a couple of years. Then I memory got a jolt.

"I was out burnin' horses in that broken back pine an' gypsum, south of Alkali Springs, one morning, when all of a sud-den I heard a Winchester crack an' a bul-let flatted up against a sandstone boulder by the side of the trail above my head. I cocked the spurs into old Baldy an' lit in there like a couple of Sioux, an' was so close together I knew they didn't come out of the same gun.

"By that time I was just bouncin' the high places, an' every time I bounced there came another sprinkle of lead. In two minutes I was over the ridge of pine and on the Niggerhead flat, burnin' the ground up and headed for Bluebird Crossing, the best I could do.

"I shore didn't pick up much, but when they're comin' at you as thick as they was at me, a feller doesn't linger, over an' above. My idea was to keep them five hundred yards in the lend of whatever there was behind me, an' after I got on the level, I looked back to see what it was.

"My first impression was that it was the whole of the Two-Kettle band, but pretty soon I seen that it wasn't, bcaus part of it had circled me an' was headin' me off from Bluebunket an' tryin' to throw me back on Hell Canon. I knew I was a goner if they did that bcaus there ain't a place between the Crossing an' the head where it's less than three orly to its feet. As the Circle Bar Seven four thousand feet down, sheer drop. A boy picked up his bridle the tenderfoot monticlo sheep couldn't find a foothold there.

"Well I gritted my teeth and rode for it, but it wasn't no good; they'd figgered it out too fine, an' the riders on the outside came closin' in on me till I had to turn. Then they set up a yip-yip-yip-yip that gave me the chills, for I knew they knew they'd got me. I did try to dodge back on 'em, but they threw out another line an' blocked that, so I had to go straight ahead for the canon.

"I got there with my five-hundred-yard lead stretched to seven an' I slid off old Baldy an' looked over the edge.

"Not a thing but the tops of the cedars down below as far they didn't seem any taller than sage brush. It turned me sick and dizzy. I climbed back in the saddle an' rode along a ways an' got off an' looked again. Same thing. I knew it would be anyway.

"Saved? Shucks! I Wasn't."

"Half way down there was a buzzard sailing around looking for something to rest. I knew he'd find it right soon; I got on the little horse again an' turned to face The Two-Kettles that was comin' up in a half circle.

"Lela Washbay was in the lead, an' grinnin' to think of the fun he was goin' to have with me. I thought to myself, 'I'll fix you anyway,' an' I pulled my gun an' whanged away. Lela an' his pony dropped. I seen that. Then I wheeled around an' whanged old Baldy over the edge of the canon."

The wagon boss approached at this moment and made some sarcastic observations which brought the group reluctant

Society Interested in Announcement of Plans for Coming Weddings

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Much interest pervades Boston society to-day, owing to the wedding in New York of Miss Ioana Hamilton Bench, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bench of New York, to the interesting young chieftain, John Hancock Ferguson, son of Thomas Fergusson, former Minister to Norway and Sweden and brother of Mrs. Edwin Locke of Beacon street. Mrs. Locke will doubtless be present at the wedding, as will also Mrs. Arthur Deane Cook of Commonwealth avenue, who will attend the bride as maid of honor. Mr. Fergusson comes originally from Baltimore, but has been making his home in New York of late. He is a graduate of Yale University and a member of a number of New York clubs, among them being the Union and the University. The ceremony is to be performed at the Hotel Majestic.

The subject of much week-end conversation at the various country houses where parties have been in progress—and a matter of rendezvous of the smart set during the past two days—was the engagement of the young chieftain, Robert Amory, Jr., who has set many of the fair ones here asking, why oh why, do so many of our eligibles go to "that city" for their brides? Mr. Amory is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Amory (Katherine ... Cranberry of Beacon street, and a brother of the Amory girls, Mary and Katherine. His fiancee is Miss Leonore Cook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lee Cook of West Fifty-ninth street. She is native in the social and charitable life of New York city and is an officer in the Junior League, which has recently won attention through its presentation of "Cap Jack Junk" at the Waldorf-Astoria. Mr. Amory is a graduate of Harvard University, of the class of 1908, and a member of the Union Boat Club and the Eastern Yacht Club.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, daughter of Mrs. John Ward Howe of Beacon street, returns to town to-day to give a second lecture before the pupils of Miss Chumberlayne's school and of Miss McClintock's school. Mrs. Hall has recently been in Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, where she has given lectures before many clubs and drawing recent audiences, and has had numerous social affairs given in her honor. Her subjects are "Personal Reminiscences of Distinguished People," "Parents—Do I Have Met," and "The Cardinal Points of Good Manners."

Mrs. R. P. James of Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, who has been entertaining considerably this season, is giving a fashionable luncheon this afternoon at her residence. A large bridge whist will be given following the luncheon, to which many have been invited.

The Wellesley College contingent are much interested in the excellent addresses that have marked this week-end at Wellesley College, the final lecture of the series tomorrow. The program to-day's speakers to-day were Miss Margaret Sherman, Miss Theresa Wilder and Associate Professor Vida D. Scudder.

+ + +

The Rev. and Mrs. Anson Titus of Raymond avenue, Somerville, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marian Titus, to Leslie Hayford of Washington, D. C. Miss Titus is a graduate of Tufts in the class of 1902. Her fiancé took his degree from the same college the year before. Mr. Hayford is connected with the Immigration Bureau in Washington.

Washington Society is making elaborate preparations for a hunt ball, and as the proposed festivity is the first one of its nature for many years there is no end of interest and excitement over plans which it is said will make it eclipse anything of the kind ever given in the capital city. Laura Meerlau, who is well known here because of her connection with the Theosophists of this city, is one of the leading spirits, and as she is distinguishing herself by inviting various unique and dear stories during this, her debutante year, the ball will doubtless bear the stamp of her originality along with that of the older circle and some of the leading patrons.

Miss Frances Burr of New York, who is a first cousin of Barbara Tucker and Tucker Burr, Jr., is to take part in the presentation of "Mikado," which is to be given at the Waldorf-Astoria on Friday evening, April 15. The play will be given for the interests of the Big Brothers Society and has never been presented in this country before. The cast of characters includes more than forty players.

+ + +

Mrs. J. H. Morrison, James J. Flinn and Alfred C. Stewart are among the Bostonians who are on their way from New York for a spring and Summer in Europe.

+ + +

An engagement long widely discussed in smart set circles has recently been made known. The Fiancée's name is uncommonly well known, and announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Ruth Boorman Ives Bonning Ayer, to Lieutenant George S. Patton of the United States Cavalry. Lieutenant Patton is stationed at Fort Sheridan, Illinois.

Here's Hope for Bad Little Girls; Read What Wise Professor Says

Is there any little Boston girl whose papa spanks her when she is disobedient? Dont all speak at once, girls.

But, on the other hand, does papa pay you a regular salary for household tasks, or you may learn what work really means?

They spank little girls out in Kansas sometimes. And then they pay them little cash for cranks a week, too, for doing household work and being good. There's a whole lot of ideas that they have in Kansas about children and how to train them. Some of these ideas are extremely interesting. They are embodied in a bulletin just issued by William A. McKeever, professor of psychology at the State Agricultural College at Manhattan.

Professor McKeever's bulletin is on the general subject of "Training the Girl to Help in the Home." Any Boston parent will find live reading in this bulletin, which says in part:

By PROF. W. A. M'KEEVER

Go where you will throughout the length and breadth of this fair land of ours, and challenge you to find among the children of men a more pleasing aspect than that of a sailing, rosy-cheeked twelve-year-old girl garbed in a neat, loose-fitting house dress and a dainty apron, while with a snowy tea towel in her hand she is engaged in drying the dinner dishes.

The time will come, of course, it must come, when the State will require all prospective home builders, before entering the marriage relation, to take a thorough course in human animal breeding and child rearing.

Among the matters specifically referred to as being hindrances to the development of a good and stable character in growing girls are the craze for clothes, lack of parental authority and the over indulgence in dissipations which, if taken in moderation, would be harmless.

It is the consensus of opinion of at least a score of modern writers on child psychology—notable among these being President G. Stanley Hall—that the industrial system is responsible for juvenile delinquents. The only institution that today is found in public schools that separate training for boys and girls.

There is a movement now under way that looks toward the establishment of a course in industrial training for children in connection with our common school system, and for every one of these girls who is being brought up at home, we must find time to devote chiefly upon the home to supply this need.

The Newly-Rich.

The present-day crusade against child labor seems to be misdirected by many. The only purpose of this movement is to prevent mercenary factory owners and others from exploiting juvenile labor in any way that hinders the normal growth of the child. It does not imply that it is wrong for children to assist with the home work.

In these times of prosperity our country is filling up with the newly-rich, who are very desirous of securing all the modern conveniences in their homes, and who are semi-intoxicated with the allurements of social display. They especially desire such arrangements as will supply all their temporal needs by means other than merely pressing a button, while they spend every spare time in the wildest excitement of society. But such living unfits children for garments and an over-rich dietary are the precursors of inefficiency and not of social improvement.

That the children of these newly-rich classes are being neglected and spoiled in respect to all of the above is painfully evident in the public schools in evidence every hand. These pampered, indulged boys and girls themselves realize the serious fault in their rearing only after it is too late to correct it.

Let Work Be Systematic.

It is not a large amount of work, but definite and systematic work that is called for. The property training the growing girl is the most thoughtful of those interrogated have urged that the best home course in domestic science for the growing girl consists in a wide variety of things to be done, something representing every department of housekeeping from basement to garret. Without a single exception, the more than one hundred parents interrogated on this girl-training subject have held that obedience is a prerequisite. They have nearly all agreed also that this important beginning is one of the most difficult parts of the whole process. To be firm, affectionate and persistent is the only successful rule of procedure here. The relationship of rational authority and implicit obedience between parent and child is one of the most beautiful of all, and when once rightly established it is maintained with little friction, while it allows for a maximum of effectiveness in training.

The first assigned tasks for the little girl may be, therefore, for the specific purpose of developing the habit of obedience. For a parent to ask a child to do such a simple thing as pick up its playthings, and not follow up the order and see that it is executed, is one of the gravest of errors.

I think it is Miss Shinn who reports the case of a mother who by actual count gave her four-year-old boy twenty-three different commands in the course of fifteen minutes and yet made no pretense of seeing that any of these orders were obeyed.

Among the statements gathered by Professor McKeever from parents is one of a bank cashier, who said to him:

Bank Cashier's Story.

"Our ten-year-old girl was willful at first and required punishment. I spanked her hard a number of times before she would yield to authority. For the past two years she has been very obedient. I pay her twenty-five cents a week for certain light tasks. We have a weekly settlement, and she is docked for any unnecessary omissions."

A physician reported:

"We require our eleven-year old girl to wash the dishes once daily while attending school and pay her for it. She regards this as reasonable and don't complain."

Professor McKeever's comment is:

"It is not uncommon for farm homes, even well-to-do ones, to require far too much of their growing daughters during the evening hours. The work is driven on with a rush and all available help is often brought into service. While comparatively few farmers actually require their daughters to labor in the field, not infrequently the latter are compelled to learn to do work that properly belongs in addition to sustaining the burdens of the household. As a result of this bad treatment the country girl often presents a listless, dejected appearance at an age when she ought to be fresh and buoyant with the vigor natural to such young life."

SOCIAL AND CLUB NOTES

Professor Genereson Patose, a fencing master and former instructor of ex-President Roosevelt, will give a fencing exhibition in Lyceum Hall, East Boston, this night. His opponent will be Charles Glynac of New York, an exponent of the French school.

The celebration of St. Patrick's Day by the Knights of the Golden Eagle took place last night at their regular meeting. The Ralfe Choral Club of Malden sang under the directorship of Mrs. James E. Council. About 400 were present.

On St. Patrick's night the annual entertainment by St. Mary's Church, North End, will be held in the new theatre, Cooper street. The program has been arranged by Matthew Sullivan, who has provided an entertainment entitled "Derby Day at Brookfair." James S. Whipple of the New York State Forest, Fish and Game Commission will deliver a lecture on "Forestry and Reforestation" at the meeting of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective Association, to be held next Thursday evening at the Hotel Brunswick.

Charles Russell Lowell Post No. 7, G. A. R., will celebrate its forty-third anniversary, and Charles Russell Lowell, W. R. C., its twenty-seventh anniversary at Post Hall, No. 1,151 Washington street, to-night.

Easy Companionship

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Mabel Herbert Urner is the author of "The Journal of a Neglected Wife," and what she has to say is interesting.

"YOU say that with a great deal of conviction."

"With no greater conviction than I feel," she answered tensely. "When I think of all the time I've wasted, restlessly seeking diversion, accepting almost any companionship rather than be alone! Oh, it has been such a criminal waste—such a futile dissipation of time and energy!

"Why?" with a laugh, "I could almost deliver a lecture on that! I would call it 'The Curse of the Age'—this disinclination to be alone. Can't you see it all around you?

"Take this boarding house, for instance—how the people gather around the parlors, on the steps, anywhere rather than go off to their rooms to work or study. And what do they talk about? What do they gain?

"Last night I spent two hours talking to Miss Morris and Mr. Carter—two hours in mere idle gossip! It was not gossip in the sense of being vicious, or even unkindly. It was merely futile—to no purpose.

A Trifling Conversation

"We talked of the various cheap table d'hotes, places where you get the best spaghetti. We talked of the shops, of the most reliable place to store furs, of a tea room where they made a specialty of waffles, of the marriage of a well-known actress announced in the evening paper, of the failure of the last new play.

"We talked of the best laundry in this neighborhood, of the cheapest place to get gloves cleaned, of how early the gas here is turned off in the upper halls, of how bad the roasts have been lately, of the lack of variety to the vegetables, and of the coffee not being as good as it was.

"We talked of the new hallboy, of how inattentive the waitresses were unless they were constantly tipped, of how hard it was to get hot water in the morning, of the umbrella I left in the hall last week and have not seen since, of how many telephone messages Miss Roberts has, of how she was cried away from the table three times, and the last time came back worried and hurried off without her dessert, of how careless they are about packages here, of how some packages for Mrs. Trahor were taken up to Mr. Harrison's room, and as he was away over the week-end, she did not get them until he came back Monday evening.

"Twice I rose to go, but Miss Morris said, 'Oh, you're not going up yet? What's it so early—only a little after ten.' And then I stayed on and on—hating myself for staying and yet dreading to go up to my room alone.

Disinclination to Be Alone

"Oh, I feel that is one of the most prominent results of this city boarding-house life—the seeking of easy companionship, the growing disinclination to be alone. I seem to have lost all sense of resourcefulness within myself—and that is fatal! Real work is ever done unless one does it alone. Trivial, futile companionship of this sort is not conducive to thought or achievement of any kind. In the last few months, except for my daily routine work, I have done nothing, thought nothing, read nothing that has been worth while. I have wasted my evenings in this idle, unprofitable way.

"And Boston is so full of opportunities for study, for improvement—lectures, libraries—such resources are infinite. And yet think of the people that waste their time, dissipate their energies, their ambitions in the unproductive companionship of the average boarding-house.

"And all because they do not want to be alone! And the less they are alone, the less they want to be! The desire to escape from themselves seems to grow upon them. Restlessly they seek companionship of any kind rather than cultivate resources within themselves."

The circulation of the EVENING AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the evening papers of Boston combined.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

THEY WILL DO THIS

"THE lady's face was writhing under a white veil in a series of remarkable contortions. In one hand she carried an umbrella; in the other a brown paper parcel. Several passers-by paused to watch her in her strange grimacing.

"Why," exclaimed one of them, "what on earth is the matter, madame?"

The facial acrobatics ceased, and a sweet smile succeeded.

"With me? Why, nothing!"

"But you look ill! Your face—— You were twisting it into all sorts of shapes."

The lady held out her hands—one with a paper parcel in it, and in the other an umbrella.

"I was only trying," she explained, "to work the edge of my veil down under my chin."

COLD DAY IN CHURCH

IN vain the tenor pleaded that he had caught a cold in his head, in consequence of an accident that had delayed the cold street car in which he had ridden to church. The leader of the choir insisted that he must sing his usual solo, but relented so far as to give him a simple hymn, and this is the way he sang it:

"The bordig light is brenkig,
The darkdess disappenns,
The suds of earth are wakig
To pedtedtial teans,
Zoch breeze that sweeps the ocead
Brigs tidigs frob afar,
Of datiods id cobbotied
Prepared for Zion's war."

The preacher gave out his text as follows. "Add Jacob auld to Rebekah his bother, Behold Esaw by brother is a hairy ad, add I ab a spoth bad."

Later, when the collection was taken, it was fouad to codsist bostly of peddies, dickels add dibes.

MARK TWAIN'S DISCOUNT

"SEVENTY-THREE is no joke," said Mark Twain on his birthday. "You can't discount seventy-three the way you could discount books in book stores thirty or forty years ago. In a book store, back in the '80's, I saw a fat historical work one day.

"'How much is this?' said I.

"'Three fifty,' said the clerk.

"'And what discount does a publisher get?'

"'Forty per cent. In the usual publisher's discount, sir,' the clerk replied, and he figured it out on a little pocket pad.

"'I am an author as well as a publisher,' I went on. 'Do authors get a discount, too?'

"'Certainly, sir, 40 per cent., the same as publishers.'

"He did a little more figuring.

"'Do you allow anything to preachers?'

"'Twenty per cent,' said the clerk.

"'Well, I am an itinerent Methodist preacher,' I said.

"'Very good,' said the clerk gravely, and he put that down, too.

"'Furthermore,' I went on, 'I am a member of the human race. Don't I get 10 per cent. for that?'

"The clerk nodded and put it down, and I tucked the book under my arm and started for the door.

"'I have no money with me to-day,' I said. 'You know my address. Send round the bill in the morning.'

"'Bill?' said the clerk, as he finished his figuring. 'Why, 55 cents are due you, sir.'"

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

EXPECT ACTIVE STEEL MARKET

STOCKS HIGHER IN NEW YORK

STATE STREET, March 14.—A dull and uninteresting market was the result of the forenoon trading. The opening in Wall Street was firm, but operations were entirely professional. The London market was somewhat unsettled as the result of settlement day there, where prices for American stocks were high.

Locally a 2% point advance in the price of Superior & Boston mining stock attracted attention and a further break of 2¾ points in Arizona Commercial shares created a somewhat uncertain feeling regarding coppers.

There was a slight weakening of New York prices in the late forenoon on the usual Monday morning rumor that the Tobacco decision would be handed down to-day. The early strength was on the lack of offering, while the recession was probably resulting. Sentiment is somewhat mixed as the immediate course of prices, although a decidedly active market is expected in Steel shares in the immediate future.

There is bullish talk on Wabash and the price responded with a 1¾ point advance. Chesapeake & Ohio was also conspicuous with a 1½ point advance from Saturday's closing. Union Pacific's early 1 point advance gave hopes that the bull party would carry its operations in other directions. Both Reading and New York Central responded in a way.

A 1½ point advance in North Butte was well commented upon. Boston banks during the week lost $400,000 reserve and reduced the New York excess $857,800.

U. S. LEADS WORLD IN COFFEE DRINKING

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The per capita consumption of coffee in the United States is increasing steadily, while that of tea remains almost stationary, according to figures of Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor. In 1880 the consumption of coffee was 9.10 pounds per capita and in 1909 it was 11.74. The United States is the world's largest consumer of coffee, while the United Kingdom holds that rank among tea-drinking nations. The imports of coffee into the United States in 1909 were 1,110,000,000 pounds, valued at $86,500,000.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Although early trading in Wall Street was only moderately active to-day substantial gains were made by the leading railroads and industrial shares. Union Pacific, Steel, Reading, Southern Pacific and Amalgamated all advanced nearly a point.

At the opening the advances were confined to small fractions, but as the session progressed trading became a little more active and quotations advanced. Special strength was shown in the strong in sympathy with the general list.

United States Rubber rose two points on small transactions while Virginia-Carolina Chemical, American Tobacco preferred and Rock Island made fractional gains. American shares were firm in London with trading light.

Inter-Continental Rubber was the feature of trading on the curb market, advancing to a new high record. Copper shares were also slightly higher.

The study of the organization of labor, civic corruption, child labor and the race question will be taken up by a class under the joint leadership of Misses Helen Beegle and Dorothy Tamsig. Luxury, use of money, ethics of property and morals of spending will be studied by a club under Miss Harriet Stryker. A class lead by Anita Hunter will study medical missions. HOLYOKE COMPANY LOSES COURT FIGHT

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Justice Wright, in the District of Columbia Supreme Court, to-day denied the application of the Valley Paper Company of Holyoke, Mass., for a writ of mandamus to compel the joint printing committee of Congress to reconsider its bid to supply paper to the government. This effectually disposes of the case.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Having secured the reaction for which all professionals have been waiting, the stock market opens the week with technical conditions improved, and with professionals and insiders inspired with a desire for higher figures.

Many large investment orders are coming into the Street now which had been held back in expectation of Supreme Court decisions, but as there is an impression the latter will not come for some time yet, it was concluded best not to wait.

Although call money is plentiful, time funds show a hardening tendency. The Bank of England has been losing gold, and only the safe arrival of American securities has prevented exports from New York.

Most of the recent advance in stocks has been based directly on what the Supreme Court of the United States has done and is expected to do. That court continues to display a remarkable sense of justice in its decisions. In the Portland Gateway case the last week it upheld the principle of fair play, even though it had to destroy a lot of scenery for which the Interstate Commerce Commissioners pleaded.

Many dividend additions are looked for this year by both railroad and industrial corporations, in spite of labor demonstrations. There is no such demand on the part of the men in the industrial field for a raise in wages as in the case of those who work on the railroads, and the reason the conservatives in the Street are more inclined to the purchase of the equipment and metal stocks than any others.

The New York Central lines have recently given an exhibit of what may be expected from the railroads, and also the railroads can only prosper when the general public is prospering, the evidence at hand is very strong in favor of the business boom, the advance in stocks and the run of good holding that was long ago forecasted for the year 1910. At the moment the stock market seems to be trending definitely to higher levels.

For a few weeks it looked as though the world's output of gold would be reduced this year, but fresh discoveries in Gold field and elsewhere indicate that the reduction of output was only temporary. Very few persons realize that Goldfield now has the greatest mine in the world, the greatest in the history of the world. And yet ten years ago the existence of that deposit of gold was not even suspected.

Viewed from the point of mere figures the February copper statistical showing is unfavorable, but looked at from the whole point of domestic consumption and the returns for the present month that the last month's statistics indicate, the unfavorable showing becomes more apparent than real. There appears to be little likelihood of further substantial increases in production before 1911; in fact, copper authorities are agreed that a year's production will show somewhat of a falling off from a year ago.

A member of the executive committee of Union Pacific says: "The policy of the Harriman lines for the next two or three years will be one of extreme conservatism, even to the extent of laying the management open to the charge of 'old fogyism.' Such a policy was out of the question during the lifetime of Mr. Harriman, because his was a nature that could not accomplish its purposes in that manner. Plans will be taken to gain for Union Pacific a reputation such as Pennsylvania has won.

Announcement is made by this director that there will be no increase in the Southern Pacific rate at the May dividend, nor is such action contemplated for any date within the next year, or at the least. Speculation is to play no part in conduct of the property. Little interest will attach to the market quotation of Southern and Union Pacific stock so far as the management is concerned.

ROCKEFELLER PRAYER OFFERED EVERY DAY

NEW YORK, March 14.—Rev. Rufus P. Johnston, pastor of the Washington Heights Baptist Church, One Hundred and Forty-fifth street and Convent avenue, in the course of a sermon on "The Salvation of a Soul," said: "John D. Rockefeller once remarked to me: 'Doctor, do you know what my daily prayer is?' I told him I had no idea. 'My prayer is that God will keep me in the same mind, the same thoughts, the same ideals and aspirations.'" Dr. Johnston said that Mr. Rockefeller, with his family, began each day with prayers. "He is the noblest, greatest and sweetest soul that I ever met," he added.

CHAMPION COPPER

Our extraordinary special market letter is on the press, and will be mailed to all clients this week. It will be sent to 55,000 addresses all over New England. It will be one of the most stupendous pieces of circular advertising ever done on a stock of this description. It will be read by 250,000 people, because it will be passed along. It will be commented upon by the entire press of New England because it will be a history-maker. The first 5,000 copies off the press will be rushed by special delivery letters to the newspapers of New England. The next 5,000 will go to our regular customers, the next 50,000 to special lists, and an extra edition will be printed for those who make application to us for a copy. It is a tremendous undertaking and the printing, envelope-addressing and mailing will probably use up 10 days, and the cost of postage alone will be over $1,000, and the printing, mailing and incidental expense $1,000 more.

Champion is now 10c per share.

If you can afford it, buy 100 for $10.

If you have money to spare, buy 500 for $50.

If you have idle funds, buy 1,000 for $100.

If you are a person of means and not afraid to take a chance, buy 10,000 for $1,000.

If you are a cold-blooded business proposition and have to be shown, jump on a train and make your own inspection, then telegraph your order to your brokers quick for 100,000 shares for $10,000.

If you are very rich, and have money to invest, send your engineer to the property, and when you get his report, buy 200,000 shares for $20,000.

If you are a banker and want to buy the entire property for $1 a share, or $1,000,000, which you can easily turn into $5,000,000, because it's worth it, and you can prove to your own satisfaction it is worth it, send your proposition to me and I will cause it to be submitted to the stockholders at a special meeting.

In conclusion: I have been on "the street" 19 years and in all that experience have never seen an opportunity anything like this one.

He either fears his fate too much;
Or his deserts are small,
That dares not put it to the touch,
To win or lose it all.

You should send for a copy of our extraordinary special market letter immediately. You owe it to yourself. And when you have read it, pass it along to your friends. You owe it to them to do so.

What is "Joe" Cannon? And Why?

Alfred Henry Lewis has answers to both of these questions in the April COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, now on all news-stands—answers that will bite into your consciousness unforgettably with the acid of truth.

The whole sinister and subterranean meaning of Cannon and Cannonism is here laid bare with the swift, keen, scalpel-like strokes of a master of character analysis and incisive literary style.

"Slim, sinuous, supple, fierce in a little way, capable of entering a smallest hole and if needs press turning 'round in it, Mr. Cannon is essentially the weasel.*He can suck the yolk from the egg of popular advantage, and then hide the shell.*By shady sleight and dubious intrigue he has served his trust masters by suppressing House attacks and House investigations. Thus he is serving them as this is read."

Concerning Mr. Cannon's recent words, so heavy with significance, "If Mr. La Follette and Mr. Cummings are Republicans, then I am not," Mr. Lewis makes this disquieting declaration and prophecy: "They had been talked over and consented to by every trust in the land. They promise new parties, new issues, new lines. The war will be Income Tax against Tariff, Man against Money, West against East."

Among other features are: "THE CRIME OF OUR VANISHED SHIPS," by Lewis Nixon; "WHAT IS TO BECOME OF YOUR BABY?" by G. Stanley Hall; "MEXICO TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW," by Otheman Stevens; "THE ONLY OPERA OCTOPUS," by Pierre Van Rensselaer Key; stories by E. Phillips Oppenheim, Bruno Lessing, Roy Norton, Mary White Slater, etc.

BARBERS AID BOSSES' UNION

A Boss Barbers' Union is organized, and both employers and help are working in harmony to promote its success.

Boston has the latest thing in labor news. This time it is the employers who have organized—and in doing so they are aided by the "ones on the pay roll."

The officers chosen are Edward J. Warren, president; F. L. Boudreo, vice-president; John Sullivan, secretary; F. J. Dempsey, treasurer.

The interesting feature about the new union is that its inaugural meeting was held in the hall of the Working Barbers' Union on No. 1125 Washington street, and F. E. O'Donnell, business agent for the union, helped in the establishment of the meeting.

It is a complete blending of capital and labor. Agent O'Donnell predicts much good, for the journeymen of the trade will result from the union of forces. The union is regarded as a great help toward the proper adjustment of all disputes.

LABOR

After a vigorous combination of both the Knox and the Hugo Industrial disputes Bills, Boyce & Milne Eight Hour Bill in Assembly 5,572, the largest individual business of Labor passed by the committee, has voted unanimously to endorse the substitute bill offered by the Secretary of the State Branch of the American Federation of Labor. This places the building trade union movement of the State against the proposed Knox-Hugo bill. It also protects, under penalty of fines ranging from $10 to $100, without the usual giving of thirty day notice to a board created for the purpose. The Boston Association of Cloakmakers' Assembly has 2,000 good-standing members, and the action taken at its meeting yesterday morning was a decided surprise, one of the most prominent rights of labor officials in the Commonwealth relatively having appeared at the committee hearings on Beacon Hill and speaking in favor of the bill.

Beginning today, every member of Custom Tailors' Union No. 25 will pay 50 cents a week to assist the striking pantsmakers, out for two weeks in an endeavor to enforce their demands for a 15 per cent. increase in wages. There still are 150 men out, although fifteen firms have settled with the union by signing the 1909 scale at work. The men who have returned to work under these conditions are assessing themselves 25 per cent. of their earnings to support the strikers.

Only four places today are affected by the weekly bartenders' strike for an 8 minimum and sixty-hour week, and they are all said to be controlled by one firm. The union is paying the strikers the same wages they would have received had they finished the week and the strike is being supported by every trade union in this city.

In an endeavor to form a national relating trades department of the American Federation of Labor, similar to that of the building, the metal and the union labels trades, Photo Engravers Union No. 5 to-day is out with a call for a united effort on the part of the various unions connected to demand such action by the A. F. of L. officials.

With 15,000 men in the Federated Trades Council of the New Haven Railroad involved, the officers of the men's union to-day state that they feel confident that a favorable reply to their request for a general increase in wages will be received from the management of the road in less than a week. The advance demanded averages 6 cents an hour.

A check for $100 was forwarded to the striking cigarmakers of Philadelphia to-day by Bottlers' and Drivers' Union No. 122 of that city. The Cigarmakers' Union sent the strikers $400 last Saturday.

The circulation of the EVENING AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its highest competitor and 75,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

Sincere Thanks, FULL CREDIT FOR A NOBLE DESIRE TO DO GOOD, Are Due John D. Rockefeller

Every Decent Man, Assuming His Intention to Be Admirable, as It Appears on the Surface, Will Thank Him, Not So Much for the Money AS FOR THE ADMIRABLE EXAMPLE THAT HE SETS

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

No subject has been more discussed in the past week than the announcement on behalf of John D. Rockefeller that he proposes NOW IN HIS LIFETIME to use his vast fortune "to promote the well-being and advance the civilization of the people of the United States."

Mr. Rockefeller's son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has resigned his position as a director of Standard Oil, and announces that he will devote his life to careful and efficient disbursement of his father's wealth.

The Rockefellers, father and son, if their intention is fully carried out, will probably give nearly a thousand millions of dollars to the purposes mentioned in the act incorporating "The Rockefeller Foundation."

The details of Mr. Rockefeller's amazing and admirable idea are furnished only in the briefest outline. But every man knows that Mr. Rockefeller's public benefactions thus far have been admirable in character. He has already given fifty-three millions of dollars to education alone. And he has spent many millions in the fighting of disease, providing for study of diseases, especially as affecting children.

Mr. Rockefeller has spent his money to fight the diseases of the body, through medical knowledge, and to fight THE DISEASE OF THE MIND—IGNORANCE—by the education of men.

The brief outline of the new Rockefeller plan is well expressed. The intention of Mr. Rockefeller of devoting his very great fortune to this Rockefeller Foundation is described by him as follows:

To promote the well-being and advance the civilization of the peoples of the United States and its territories and possessions, and of foreign lands, in the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge, in the prevention of suffering and in the promotion of any and all the elements of human progress.

The best work that a man, a political party, or a nation can do is mapped out in those few words.

To advance civilization is the great task of the human race, and civilization will be advanced and CAN be advanced only by "the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge." The spreading of knowledge will prevent suffering, it will solve all of our problems. For when men KNOW, they do what is just and right, and in doing so protect their brothers.

Mr. Rockefeller and his son might have gone on indefinitely ACCUMULATING MONEY.

Mere compound interest on the vast Rockefeller fortune must inevitably have made of that fortune, not only a colossal accumulation of wealth, but a great national problem, and perhaps a menace.

Of his own free will the man who built up this mountain of gold announces that its concentrated force, backed by the power of organization which accumulated it, is to be devoted to human welfare.

Think what you please of Rockefeller in the past. Describe as you please his business methods, his ruthlessness in competition.

But remember that he at least is doing WHAT THE PEOPLE HAVEN'T HAD THE BRAINS TO DO FOR THEMSELVES. He is taking national wealth and using it FOR THE NATIONAL WELFARE.

He is transforming his streams of oil into colleges, books and scientific laboratories.

Where others find in money only added possibilities of stupid self-indulgence, Rockefeller prefers to find the force that spreads knowledge. He is a great educator, and in years to come men will realize that the greatest part of his educative force was not in money, nor in college buildings, nor in cash payment to intelligent scientists, but in the example that he has put before the world, in the lesson that he has taught the ignorant people.

John D. Rockefeller shows the people that the national wealth should belong to the people. He takes that wealth and he gives it to the people. He shows that it should be used in education, in science, and he uses it in that way.

Rockefeller is setting his millions free, freeing them from his own personal, selfish service, restoring them to labor, to free work for the people.

And in years to come, willingly or unwillingly, all others will do what Rockefeller does to-day.

The national wealth will eventually be truly national—BELONGING TO THE NATION—and Rockefeller sets the example to-day.

Remember the time when in the old English town there were four sets of gallows, all four sets kept busy! The king had his gallows, and used it to hang men for the good of the king.

The bishop had his, and he hanged men for the good of religion and church property.

The lord of the manor had his, and he hanged men to keep up his dignity and power.

And the humble merchants finally, after long struggling, also had their gallows, and they hung anybody—even a child in its early teens—that stole the value of a few shillings!

By and by the merchants, on their knees before Parliament, begged for fewer gallows in the town, saying that too many men were hanged, and they were laughed at!

But the gallows are gone now, only here and there judicial murder still claims its victims, punishing ignorance or a malformed brain with its own punishment of death.

But the king no longer asks to be allowed to hang men. And the bishop would by no means consent to hang anybody.

The lords and the merchants would say: "Rascals will stay unhanged if you ask US to hang them."

Men no longer take delight in the power to murder.

The day will come, and Rockefeller foreshadows it, when men will no longer take delight in the power to kill with the slow death of poverty.

To-day THIS man has his millions, and THAT man has his millions, and all over the world the poor work to pile up these millions.

The time will come when men will find their only satisfaction IN DOING FOR THEMSELVES, INSTEAD OF MAKING OTHERS DO FOR THEM. The time will come when men's pride will be in the well-being of their fellowmen, not in their own stupid luxury and self-indulgence.

Rockefeller foreshadows this better day. His act is not that of an individual, but a sign of the times. What he does NOW others will do more and more.

And our material problem will be settled, in a day perhaps not so far distant, when those that have the really great power in their brains will use that power FROM THE BEGINNING for the benefit of those less fortunate.

THE SHIP-WRECKED MARINERS

(An Allegorical Suggestion to Framers of Immigration Bills)

By RABBI M. M. EICHLER

Once upon a Time a Ship sailing on the Ocean was thrown by the Storm against high Rocks so that it foundered a hopeless Wreck. The Mariners clung to the Rocks and despaired of ever Escaping from their Perilous Position. When the Storm abated they climbed the Peak of the highest Cliff in the hope of Discovering some Vessel that might Save them.

To their great Surprise and greater Delight they found that they were on the Coast of a Beautiful Island. With Difficulty they made their Way into the Interior, and how Great was their Joy when they saw that the Island was Immensely Large in Area and like a Garden blooming with Rich Vegetation and Luscious Fruit.

They thanked God for their Miraculous Escape and called the Place the "Isle of Delight." There being no other Inhabitants, they Settled there and were happy.

After a While they Noticed that Other Victims of the Stormy Seas were from time to time cast upon their Rocky Shores and Supplicated to be Admitted in the "Isle of Delight." At the Beginning this was Cheerfully Done, for they were Few in Numbers and the Land was Large and Fertile.

But in the Course of Time their Sentiments Changed, and beginning to Regard the Island as Their Own Property, they looked with Disfavor upon Newcomers. There arose a Strife among them as to their Future Attitude toward the Ship-wrecked.

A council of the Elders was convened to decide the Matter. And the Elders divided into Two Parties.

One party, calling themselves "Exclusionists," declared that for their Self-protection and to Prevent a Possibility of Overcrowding no Stranger should in the future be Admitted into the Island.

The other party, who called themselves "Restrictionists," advocated the Establishment of Strict Rules to govern Admission into the Island.

Said they:

"Let us Dispense our Hospitality with Wise Discrimination. When a ship-wrecked Mariner begs to be Saved, let him pass through a Rigid Examination. If he be physically Strong so that he can do us Service, if he can pay us a head-tax and Show Credentials let him Enter. If he Cannot Comply with these conditions let him Perish."

Thereupon arose an Aged Man who had but recently been Rescued from a Wreck, and on whose Sad Face the Traces of Suffering were still Plainly Visible. All turned to Listen to the Aged Mariner.

"Fellow refugees," he said, "can we forget the Sad Plight in which we all were not so very Long Ago? It would be Cruel to Refuse aid to Others who are now in Similar Distress. Let us Remember that this island is not our own, that we are all Strangers here. Let this "Isle of Delight" Forever Remain a Haven of Refuge to all Mariners in distress."

And the Elders bowed their Heads in Shame.

Now, Isn't It Tough?

WAH!
AND NOT ONLY THAT, BUT—
ISN'T IT TOUGH WHEN THE BABY SMASHES IN THE HEAD OF YOUR DRUM
AND PULLS YOUR HAIR WHEN YOU TRY TO GET IT AWAY FROM HIM
AND HOWLS WHEN YOU TRY TO GIVE HIM A PEACE OFFERING
YOUR MOTHER SENDS YOU TO BED FOR TEASING HIM!
